Lancaster Farming

Vol. 46 No. 13 | Five Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, January 27, 2001 | $32.00 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy

In this issue's Grower & Marketer section and Rose Notes, Linda share their experiences as produce and flower-stand owners. Above, Courtney Davis, 5, and sister Julia combine efforts to come up with their own custom-made bouquet. They are the daughters of Michael and Ann Marie Davis, Manheim Township. Also, this special section is a helpful produce buyers' contact list.

About 112 Attend Market, Weather Forecasting Event

Conference Provides Producers With Cautious View Of Exports, Scientific View Of Weather

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Economic forecast for soybean growers in Pennsylvania: good, and perhaps improving.

Long-term weather forecast: That's another story.

Both were the center of producer attention Tuesday at the "Decisions: For the Real Beginning of the 21st Century" Conference at the Days Inn and Conference Center near Allentown.

For grain producers who believe ag export markets could improve price for corn and soybeans, there's good, maybe even great, news.

According to Bob Utterback, registered commodity broker, president of Utterback Marketing Services Inc. in New Richmond, Ind., and ag marketing adviser for Farm Journal Magazine, meat consumption in China "is going to grow phenomenally in the next 15 years," he told about 112 crop producers and agri-industry representatives Tuesday morning at the conference.

There will be "a tremendous demand for animal feeds in China," he said, supplied by corn exports from the U.S. that could bolster domestic markets.

China, though a major trade player with the U.S., however,

Railroads, Wartime, And Long-Term Careers At The Stockyards

MICHELLE RANCK

Editor's note: This article is the second in a series exploring historical and present-day Lancaster Stockyards. John M. Hoober, Melvin Horn, and Bill McCoy share their memories of the business conducted through the Depression, wartime, droughts, a fluctuating market and a growing stockyard business.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Vestiges of a booming business still cling to the quiet stockyards in Lancaster. Rail cars still rattle past the stockyards, but no longer stop to deliver cattle from the West.

Pens still stretch far along the property, laced with a labyrinth

Three Generations Work Together On Northumberland County Farm

MILTON (Northumberland Co.) — "It amazes me to see how much the farm has brought us (three families) together, because we must work together to make it work," said Melinda Wolfe, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess.

Teamwork is the name of the game at Wolfe's Powerline Dairy, where three generations operate the recently expanded facilities. Melinda (better known as Mindy), her parents Dean and Rinda Wolfe, her grandparents Jennie and Ernest, and her uncle Ray and his family recently added a freestall barn to increase herd size to 400 and a milking carousel that holds 32 cows.

The family milks three times daily, raises alfalfa and corn on the 300 acres, and fulfills the many behind-the-scenes jobs required for a successful dairy operation.

Melinda has 17-year-old twin siblings for which she grew up being the big sister. Now, roles are becoming somewhat blurred as her brother is in charge of the morning milking and is "the boss" when Mindy helps with the milking.

The experience in working as a team and helping each other has proven to be an asset in Melinda's new role as the state dairy princess, who with 44 other county princesses promotes the state's number one industry.

"The dairy industry is something I really believe in. It's easy for me to promote the industry, because I see its importance," Melinda said.

"I believe in the value of wearing a tiara because it grabs the attention of people, but I want people to realize that 'dairy princess' is a working title, not a beauty contest," Melinda said. "I believe the dairy princess program does a lot of good for the dairy industry. We have the opportunity to talk with people that we wouldn't have otherwise," Mindy said of the attention garnered by the tiara.

When Melinda was first crowned SUN dairy princess, she represented Northumberland, Snyder, Union, and Mon-

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer

ATLANTA, GA.
January 24, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was slow to fair. Seller offerings were adequate to tight and were in the closer balance on the 3 pound sizes. Live supplies were moderate; weights remained mostly desirable to heavier than desired. Processing schedules were reduced at several plants and were just moderate in total. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 52 to 66 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady on the 2.5 and 3 pound sizes, steady on the heavier weights. Breast cuts, particularly bone-in continued to clear well and increased inquiry was noted for thighs. Interest in additional wings was off sharply.

Eastern Region Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.
Jan. 19, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Prices were irregular when compared to a week earlier. Trading was light as most were at the convention. The undertone was steadier.

Supplies were sufficient for needs. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending January 13, 2001 were 15% more than last week, but 14% less than a year ago.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
January 24, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest was generally unaggressive during midweek trading, and most dealers were cautious and limiting floorstocks to most immediate needs. Offerings of bone-in breasts remained tight, and boneless-skinless breasts were usually balanced to no more than adequate. Dark meat parts were more than sufficient, and wings were at least adequate. Movement into retail and distributive channels was mostly light, however, attractive feature activity on breast items was funneling some additional product from the market. The market tone was fully steady to firm on bone-in breasts, fully steady to instances firm on boneless-skinless breasts, about steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
January 24, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary Wheat bids finshed mixed, 1 to 3 cents lower to 2 cents higher. Corn bids 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 4 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 4 cents higher.

Slight declines were seen in the wheat pits, Wednesday, as beneficial snows is projected for parts of the Hard Red Winter areas. Corn bids were slightly higher with reports of a reduction in U.S. corn planted acres this spring but indications of StarLink corn founded in shipments to Japan limited gains. Soybean bids rebounded after yesterday's sharp advances. Fund buying in soybean market also added support to bean bids.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JAN. 29–FEB. 4, 2001

ST. BRIGID, FEBRUARY 1

TWO WINTERS?

"If Candlemas Day (February 2) is bright and clear, there will be two winters in the year," goes the old weather lore Sound like Groundhog Day? That's because our modern Groundhog Day traditions have their roots in the old Candlemas rites "If Candlemas Day be fair and bright, winter will have another flight But if it be dark with clouds and rain, winter is gone and will not come again" The candlelighting extends back to Roman times, when candles were part of purification rituals at this time of year "Februa" was the month for cleansing, when Yule greens were removed from homes and churches, and old brush and debris were burned to prepare the fields for the next sowing

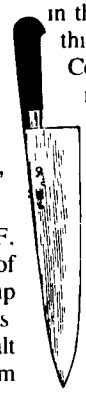
On Candlemas Day, have half your wood and half your hay.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Clean wax from candleholders by putting them into the freezer first. Once frozen, the wax will chip off easily.

PESTO RACK OF LAMB

8 ribs rack of lamb (up to 2 pounds)
salt and pepper
1/2 cup prepared pesto sauce
1 cup freshly made bread crumbs
fresh parsley or chopped basil, to garnish



Preheat oven to 375°F. Scrape the bone ends of the lamb clean, just up to where the chop begins Season the chops with salt and pepper, then coat them in the pesto sauce. Dredge this in the bread crumbs. Cover bone ends with aluminum foil, place rack of lamb onto a baking sheet, and bake for 15 minutes Remove foil and bake for another 20 minutes, or until chops are done Slice into and serve, garnished with fresh herb of your choice

Makes 4 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

When the wind is in the east on Candlemas Day, there it will stick until the second of May.

If Candlemas Day be fine and clear, Corn and fruits will then be dear.

Okla. National Stockyards

Oklahoma City, OK
January 24, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle 1.00-2.00 lower. Stockers and calves steady. Demand moderate for feeder cattle as pen space becoming a limiting factor. However, lower levels due mainly to heavily discounted summer CME contracts. Demand good for stockers with heifer activity improving due to wide steer-heifer gap.

Quality plain through attractive. Feeder cattle in medium to fleshy conditions; stockers and calves in thin to fleshy conditions.

Weigh-ups gaunt to average, few full. Slaughter cows 2.00-3.00 higher. Slaughter bulls 1.00-2.00 higher. Packer demand very good. Total of 500 cows and bulls sold with 30 percent to packers. Receipts this week 9686; last week 12,599; last year 11,879.

Supply consisted of 56 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 39 percent calves and light yearlings under 600 lbs; 5 percent cows and bulls.

Heifers comprised 42 percent of feeder and calf supply.

OPINION

A Valid Vote?

Penn State Lancaster County, through the work of agent Chet Hughes, recently released commentary on the pork referendum conducted in the fall last year.

Recently Lancaster Farming reported that the referendum resulted in a rejection of the pork checkoff.

It's interesting that, according to Hughes, some producer groups disagree with the action and have filed for legal action against the USDA. On Jan. 12 this year, the National Pork Producers Council, Michigan Pork Producers Association, and some independent producers filed for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, preserving the status quo and enjoining the termination of the pork checkoff program until a "full and fair hearing has occurred."

NPPC President Craig Jarolimek claims that only one in seven pork producers actually voted against the program and "the majority of pork producers have not been heard from."

In Pennsylvania, 286 votes were cast for termination of the checkoff and 191 voted for continuance. Lancaster County, a prominent pork production region, voted 35 for termination, 24 to continue. A balanced vote for the county. Nevertheless, Hughes is careful to note it was obvious that voter turnout was "sparse."

Plenty of publicity about the referendum was published here and in other newspapers. Yet still the voter turnout was sparse.

By the way: the injunction contends that USDA has acted unlawfully in holding a binding referendum despite having no legal authority to do so, Hughes noted. It further claims the referendum was conducted in a manner filled with irregularities, which failed to apply consistent standards, or to count all lawfully cast ballots. Hughes notes: "does this all sound familiar?"

If the checkoff is canceled, producers can be affected in ways unknown. What happens now?

And for those producers who missed the vote — if the educational and research programs are affected in detrimental ways, don't you wish you had more say?

Now Is The Time

To Look At 10 Keys Of Profitable Dairying

According to Bradley Hilty, Penn State Dairy Alliance senior associate, by focusing on 10 key management practices, dairy producers can build a profitable business and insure they will survive the tough times and prosper when times are good.

These 10 keys are:

1. Develop a strategic business plan. Developing a plan forces the farmer to look into the future and visualize where they would like to be in five to 10 years.

2. Control the controllables: production, efficiency, and marketing. Develop a good marketing strategy using the risk management tools available.

3. Maximize forage quality and feed a balanced ration.

4. Insure cow comfort.

5. Information management: know your cost of production. Compare production costs and figures for other key indicators to those of the top 10 percent of profitable dairies.

6. Implement a management team. The team can help develop strategies that will help improve the profitability of the farm.

7. Make wise investments. Analyze every investment to determine the return it will generate. What is the payback period? Large investments should have a payback period of 7 to 8 years.

8. Do enterprise analysis.

9. Emphasize your strengths.

10. Manage your expenses. A good benchmark is to manage expenses (less interest and depreciation) to 65 percent of income.

To Control Phosphorus Levels

Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent, reports feeding phosphorus (P) at excessive levels increases feed costs and contributes to excess buildup of P in the soil.

Farmers need to address this situation by following the new National Research Council (NRC) guidelines for dietary P. Many dairy farmers feed cows more P than needed. For high producing cows in early lactation, the new NRC recommendation for P is 0.38 percent compared to 0.48 percent in 1989. Cows fed the lower rate for three years showed normal bone strength and P levels.

Lowering the dietary level of P reduced P excretion and feed costs without adversely affecting milk production or reproduction. In the past, the level and availability of P in feedstuffs was not well defined.

Recent research indicates that P in many feedstuffs is much more available than originally thought. On many farms and for many cows, the forage portion of the ration may supply all the P cows need.

Consult your nutritionist for advice on fine-tuning the P levels of your rations.

To Look At Dry Matter Intake

Good dry matter intake is the key to good milk production, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County extension dairy agent.

If cows do not consume it, they cannot convert it to milk. It is that simple. Dry matter intake may be affected greatly by moisture content of feeds, especially high moisture feeds.

For example, if cows are being fed 40 pounds of silage at 60 percent moisture (40 percent dry matter), they are consuming 16 pounds of dry matter (40 pounds times 0.4 equals 16). If the moisture jumps to 70 percent (30 percent dry matter) and feeding rates are not adjusted, dry matter intake drops to 12 pounds. At 2.5 pounds of milk per pound of dry matter intake, this decrease in dry matter intake will cause a 10-pound drop in milk production (4 times 2.5).

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Progress is not where we stand, but in what direction we are moving."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

DON'T BE STUPID!

Background Scripture:
Luke 16.
Devotional Reading:
Luke 12:15-21.

Ten years ago, Valere and I were victims of pickpockets in Lisbon, Portugal. Riding a streetcar, we were packed tightly with a number of passengers. When we returned to our hotel, we found that they had taken my cash and Valere's wallet in her purse. At first we couldn't believe it.

Whoever stole Valere's wallet had managed what seemed an impossible feat: they had gotten up under her cape, somehow under or through her jacket, and into her purse that was closed with a clasp. All the while we were quite unaware. We couldn't help feeling that such bad people could be so good at the bad they were doing.

When we look at Luke 16:1-13, we find this a different kind of parable than most. While the parable of the Good Samaritan is a story of a good example, that of the Dishonest Steward is not. The "rich man" in the parable is not God or Christ and the follower of Jesus is not intended to behave as the Dishonest Steward did.

Sons Of Light

So this is not a parable of example but of analogy. They key is in 16:8b: "for the sons of this world are wiser in their own generation than the sons of light."

The "sons if the world" are the worldly people who are dedicated to material rather than spiritual values. The "sons of light" are those who are not of the world, but for a time live in it. All too often they are inept in living in the here and now, while the "sons of the world," like our pickpockets, are often very good at what they do. Frequently they are more dedicated to their ignoble ends than are the "sons of light" to their spiritual ends.

All of Luke 16 is about the right use of material wealth. Just because we have a spiritual destiny doesn't mean that the followers of Jesus can be indifferent or negligent in the way that they use material wealth. Although this world is not our final destination, there is nothing that says we have to be stupid in the way we live while we are here.

Even when Jesus says, "And I tell you, make friends for yourselves by means of unrighteous mammon, so that when it fails they may receive you into the eternal habitations," (16:9), he not telling us to use our material possessions to buy friends in the material world, but to better qualify ourselves for the life "in the eternal habitations."

Lovers Of Money

The follower of Jesus must not love money itself, but he or she should not fail to use it for good purposes. "The Pharisees, who were lovers of money. heard all this," Luke tells us. That is the problem: loving money and material wealth to the point that it rules us rather than the other way around.

"No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one and love the other, or he will be devoted to the one and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon" (16:13). In these words Jesus once again throws down the challenge of radical discipleship: serve him and him alone!

The Parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus (16:19-31) is another demonstration, this time by bad example. The Rich Man was apparently good at amassing and keeping his wealth. The principles by which he lived assured him of a high old time here on earth. Lazarus, by contrast, was one of the "children of light." Actually, Lazarus presented the Rich Man with an opportunity to use his wealth for long-run security. But he passed up his chance. In the long run, he paid a terrible price for his worldly stewardship.

In John Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, we find this demonstrated in three characters. Worldly-Wiseman is a "son of darkness," a man who, like the dishonest steward, skillfully feathered his earthly nest. He planned for the future, but it was the wrong future, a future outside the Celestial City. Ignorance, on the other hand, was a Christian, but he had no zeal, no zest for life, no involvement in this world. Detached from the world, he was amazed to find the gates of the Celestial City closed against him. Christian, however, sought God with the same dedication and energy with which others seek wealth and success, and the gates of the Celestial City were opened to him.

Where is it written that the followers of Jesus Christ have to be inept at living in this world, leaving it by default to the "sons of darkness?"

At Arasapha Farm, Simple Ideas Help Renovate Damaged Pastures

ANDY ANDREWS

GRADYVILLE (Delaware Co.) — Sharpen the blade. Vary the mower height so no more than a third of the grass is cut. Ensure there is enough organic material in the soil.

Do those things according to a pasture renovator and you can accomplish so much, said Tony Striedieck, Ornamental Landscaping Inc., Gradyville.

In the spring, Striedieck began work on renovating damaged pastures caused by overgrazing sheep on the family's Arasapha Farm.

Near the entrance to the farm several acres in pasture have had to endure abuse. The sheep, said Striedieck, have grazed it down to nothing. On top of that, the area was used as a parking lot during several seasonal festivals.

To make matters even worse, the land endured a scorching drought. And improper lime too heavy in magnesium, damaged the actual soil makeup.

But it's the simple things Striedieck concentrates on. He noted that cutting the grass right has the equivalent effect of applying high-quality fertilizer, at least with his experience down south.

In Florida where he received lots of training, Striedieck noted that turf is serious business, he said.

I recently had the occasion to meet and spend an afternoon with Dr. Burt Smith from the University of Hawaii. Dr. Smith specializes in pasture management. He worked with animals a good bit and has produced a video on Brush Herding. Smith has also authored a book entitled "Moving 'em" which is a guide to low stress animal handling. After discussing some of Dr. Smith's points on animal handling, I decided to do a search of research papers on the subject. My search

Producers, Importers Must Continue To Pay Pork Checkoff Assessment

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Jan. 19, the U.S. District Court for Western Michigan, Grand Rapids, Mich., granted the National Pork Producers Council and other plaintiffs a temporary restraining order prohibiting the U.S. Department of Agriculture from publishing a rule to end the pork checkoff program based on a referendum August-September 2000.

In accordance with this court order, the Pork Promotion, Research, and Consumer Information Order is still in effect and pork producers and importers must continue to pay pork checkoff assessments. Failure to pay the assessment will be subject to a fine of up to $1,100 per violation.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State University
January 19, 2001

Futures Market Strengthens

- Class III futures to peak at $12/cwt.
- Class IV futures to peak at $13/cwt.
- Milk supply tightens.

The outlook for dairy markets is showing signs of improvement. First, milk production in December actually showed signs of slowing down. The number of cows on farms fell from the prior month. And, the futures market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (as of January 18, 2001) is optimistic about Class III and IV prices for the remainder of 2001.

December 2000 milk production for 20 select states totaled 11.9 billion pounds, unchanged from a year earlier. And, December cow numbers were at 7.84 million head, about 4,000 head less than November 2000. Production per cow was 16

Human Resource Management For Small Farms

Richard Stup
Senior Extension Associate
Penn State Dairy Alliance

People often say that human resource management is only for large farms. They claim that because the farm they operate doesn't hire non-family workers, they don't have to worry about managing human resources.

Industry advisors such as veterinarians, nutritionists, and extension agents sometimes claim that because their clients are mostly small farms, human resource management is not an issue for them. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, there are at least three reasons why human resource management may be the most limiting factor on small farms.

Reason one: compared to businesses with large workforces each individual worker is more critical to farms with a small workforce. Consider the difference in impact between one unmotivated worker in a total workforce of fifteen compared to one unmotivated worker in a total workforce of three.

The unmotivated worker in the small workforce will have a large impact on the attitude of his two fellow workers. If he doesn't do his share, then the other two workers will need to work much harder to make up for him. In the larger workforce, the unmotivated worker is assigned a much smaller share of the total workload. If his work is poor or inadequate, there are 14 other people to pick up the slack. Also, the negative psychological impact of one poor worker in a group of fifteen is much less than in a small labor force.

Because of the potential impact of a poor quality worker, recruitment and selection are critical. As the old saying goes, 'Hire hard, manage easy." In an all family situation, it is important that members feel involved and important for family reasons as well as business reasons.

Management responsibilities should be delegated so that each family member has opportunities to use their intellect to help the business rather than just their physical efforts. This will help junior family members develop their potential.

Reason two: small farms often neglect important management functions because routine chores seem more urgent. All farms must allocate limited human resources to management functions of the business in addition to routine chores. Farm employing large workforces have people whose specific role is management.

Managers may not actually perform the chores, but they make sure that adequate resources are available, and that the right chores are done in order to meet the goals of the dairy. They also monitor the progress of the business, making sure that everything is staying on course.

Workers on small farms must perform the chores and manage.

This means they must be more diligent about setting aside time to manage. Sometimes small farms simply cannot provide management and labor to meet the needs of all aspects of the business. In those cases, small farms must find ways to secure human resources from outside the farm workforce.

Outside human resources might take the form of additional management services from the breeding company, veterinarian, feed supplier, accountant, etc. Or it might mean hiring management and labor in the form of custom crop services, heifer raising, custom dry cow care, etc.

Reason three: small farms are handicapped by a lack of time for leadership activities. In a business, leadership means stepping back to see the big picture, determining the business's potential advantages in the market, and charting a course to benefit from the potential advantages.

Business leaders need to step away from the day-to-day activities of the farm. They need to learn about the market, the activities of other leaders, and new technologies in the industry. Large farm owners and managers sometimes devote all of their time to business leadership activities.

If small farms do not commit some of their human resources to business leadership failure is only a matter of time. Small farm managers need to honestly devote time to finding where their potential advantages lie.

This means taking time away from the farm for recreation and learning. To make this possible, small farm managers should standardize and write down work procedures and keep equipment in good repair so that temporary or part-time help can be employed.

Progressive small dairies recognize their need to manage vital human resources. They use effective recruiting practices to find and hire good workers. They develop communication and organizational skills so that family and non-family workers can join together as a team.

They adapt their businesses to take advantage of outside human resources for labor and management. Progressive small dairies use their limited human resources to seize every market advantage they can find.

Pennsylvania Young Farmers 2001 Winter Educational Institute

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — Pennsylvania young farmer members from across the commonwealth will gather in Greensburg to discuss social and economic elements which impact their future, as well as, their concern about agriculture as a way of life.

On Feb. 6-8, the young farmers association (PYFA) will host their annual winter convention at the Four Points Sheraton in Greensburg. While here, members will conduct business meetings, attend educational workshops, recognize outstanding members in their association, tour local farms and areas of interest, and share in fellowship with other members of the agriculture community.

The convention will kick off on Tuesday morning at 10 a.m. with the first portion of the spokesperson for agriculture contest, a media blitz to be held at the Shop-N-Save Supermarket at the Westmoreland Mall. Contestants will be judged on their interaction with consumers and members of the media while discussing agriculture issues and answering questions. The PYFA will also select one luck shopper and pay for the grocery items in their cart.

Tuesday afternoon will be spent touring the Richard Stoner and Sons dairy farm, St. Vincent Archabbey Basilica, and a gristmill and mine reclamation area.

In the afternoon the spokesperson contest will reconvene with the final portion of the competition, a five-minute impromptu speech followed by a ten-minute question-and-answer session. The entire contest will culminate in the evening when the winner is announced at the opening banquet.

While the delegates of the convention conduct their annual business meeting on Wednesday morning, the women will be having their own program including a basket weaving demonstration, lunch at the Ligonier Country Inn, and visiting the Southern Allegheny's Museum of Arts.

After lunch, the men will participate in educational workshops on stress management, farm safety, and will be able to obtain their pesticide license certification.

The highlight of the convention will be held on Wednesday evening at the awards banquet. Individuals who have dedicated themselves to the betterment of their farm businesses, their families, their communities, the young farmer organization, and the ag industry as a whole (will be honored for their work in the agriculture industry).

The convention will end on Thursday at the closing luncheon, which will be held after a tour of the Auen farm feedlot in Saltsburg and the Wayne and Hope Frye dairy farm.

To Frost Seed Alice White Clover

Alice is a tall large leafed white clover developed for exceptional yields of palatable high quality forage. Alice clover has shown tremendous nitrogen fixing benefits for the grass (especially ryegrass) that grows with it. We've had many comments that the pastures with Alice stay green longer into the summer. Alice has greater stolen density than most ladino type clovers allowing for better persistance under grazing. Recent studies show an increased dry matter intake of 2 pounds per cow per day if clover is included in the pasture.

will probably be getting many soybeans from an ever-rapidly expanding soybean producing industry in Brazil.

Brazil is ideal to be a major exporter of soybeans. Most of the country's northwest regions are served by the Amazon River, 2000 miles long and deeper than the Mississippi. A rail system is being put in place, noted Utterback, to connect cropland to ports.

Like the Old West of the U.S. a century and a half ago, "They're making land in South America," said Utterback.

And Asia is actively investing in South America to grow soybeans for confinement facilities. They're building crushing plants to crush South American beans.

The downside to U.S. producers: if China "ticks us off," said Utterback, "do we do a trade embargo on them?"

Producers must work to get the U.S. State Department to not use "food as a political weapon," he said, because if that happens, it could have "major, long-term implications."

Utterback believes there are several distinct patterns developing on the world economic scene:

- The dollar will not be allowed to crash, he said.
- The U.S. will continue to use food as a policy weapon.
- South America will grow as a major grain supplier, with Brazil a major player.
- Asia, including China and Japan, will be a major growth area, good news for potential U.S. ag exports.

On the global market, "we're still the leading economy. If we cool off, it will have a direct bearing on the Asian economies," Utterback said.

Utterback noted that it is important to look at the economic "big picture" to be able to predict where commodity prices will be.

He noted that the longest period of economic growth in U.S. history has been achieved, but there are many who believe "this is going to come back and haunt us," he said. "Maybe the prosperity has lasted a little too long."

High consumer debt is an issue. Occasionally, home equity loans have paid for the economic expansion. Utterback noted that in Lafayette, Ind., houses are being built at $300,000 each, with people buying "new Suburbans in the front and a boat in the back," he said.

While a mild recession because of the "economic correction" will no doubt be under way by the fall of this year, and could last early into 2002, the proposed Bush "tax cut" could either refuel a sliding economy or, in case of a market panic, the consumer could merely take the money and stick it in the bank, a way of shoring up against impending economic doom.

And the recession could get even worse if the "fuel prices stay high and consumers panic," said the broker.

Fortunately, noted Utterback, President Bush will likely operate the U.S. government like a "business," he said.

And as natural gas prices remain high, nitrogen sources could be in extremely short supply. Nitrogen is a key input for corn production. Natural gas is the source of hydrogen, and energy, for producing anhydrous ammonia, from which other nitrogen fertilizers are derived.

For soybean producers, nitrogen isn't a great input cost. But with fertilizer prices escalating because of the natural gas crunch, less corn yields could result, and more corn acres could be placed in soybeans.

In rare instances where nitrogen fertilizer is available, anhydrous ammonia prices have soared to $420 a ton, according to information from Ohio State University.

The Farm Bill of 1996 was written to get the government out of farming, "designed to take you off the government teat," Utterback said. But with the $28 billion budget surplus, with a tax break, what will the 2002 Farm Bill look like?

"No one likes where we're at, and no one knows how to fix it," Utterback said.

In the past, producers "went for the brass ring" in terms of how they planned their crops and conducted business. The government could always come in and bail the producer out. We "believed the government was my protection against myself," said the Farm Journal Magazine ag marketing adviser.

The 1996 Farm Bill changed all that.

And times are changing rapidly on the political front. "This is a very fluid time," said Utterback, with a "new president, a new secretary of agriculture, and a new head of the Environmental Protection Agency."

Producers should concentrate on industrial and domestic use of corn and less on exports if they want to cautiously ensure their markets remain intact despite the constant volatility and market uncertainty. But producers shouldn't give up on the export market.

The key is to organize into better marketing groups and develop individual marketing plans to see producers through the next several years. Also, producers should invest in crop insurance and use loan deficiency payments (LDPs) as part of their grain marketing plan.

In the future, farmers will become more like crop managers for grain suppliers, making the connection from field to table. "That will be one of the biggest and hardest evolutions for farmers to handle," noted Utterback, by supplying the land and labor and transferring the risk. Farmers value their independence, Utterback said, and believe they control their fate.

A farmer must "think like a CEO," he said, and be as "smart as an MBA" in developing the skills to manage operating costs and labor.

Paul Knight, Pennsylvania state climatologist and instructor of meteorology at Penn State, provided insight on some scientific methods used to predict weather.

The Climate Prediction Center (CPC) of the National Weather Service (NWS) data showed that, indeed, the cold that has blanketed the Northeast since November has been "persistent," Knight said, but not exceptionally cold. Knight knows of no record lows set at all in the state.

But the persistent cold weather is a result of a jet stream pattern that has brought normally cold air in the north central part of Canada and Alaska down south, essentially leaving normally cold parts of Canada warm for the season.

For obtaining good, reliable forecasts, predictor models need more information from the oceans. The interaction of the oceans and atmosphere together define what types of weather occur where.

"Seventy percent of the earth's surface is covered by water," said Knight. Changes in ocean temperatures at different points can help improve forecast models.

However, for summer models, nothing in the Pacific Ocean "tips its hand," with nothing forcing any big changes. The El Nino/La Nina weather cycles continue back to a more normal pattern.

So forecasters are forced to rely on historical records to look at patterns.

Looking over state records, Knight realized that not having a drought recently "is unusual," he said. Droughts are common, more common for the state than we realize.

In actuality, since 1900, U.S. annual precipitation has increased by at least 10 percent, Knight noted.

For Pennsylvania precipitation in the 1990s, there is a "remarkable oscillation in frequency," he said. The entire state with 180 cooperative weather stations can record, in significant ways, what goes on.

Knight noted a persistent cycle: 1990 was a wet year, followed by 1991 as dry; 1992 was wet, 1993 was dry; 1994 was wet, followed back and forth by a dry year in 1995, a wet year in 1996, a dry year in 1997, a wet year in 1998, and a dry year in 1999. So if 2000 was wet, in 2001, "what do you think it will be?" he asked those attending the conference.

In the NWS prediction center's 13-month forecast, with a release date of Jan. 18, without a "significant signal" from the Pacific Ocean, computer models predict a dry spring.

In Knight's research, after several droughts followed by wet years through the past century, in all of them, a spring month from March to May was very warm, and a month was also wet, Knight noted.

And 2001 should be dry in eastern Pennsylvania. The climate prediction center also sees very warm temperatures early in Georgia and Florida.

pounds below a year ago.

December 2000 milk production was up 19.3 percent in Indiana, 7.4 percent in New Mexico, 6.3 percent in Idaho, and only 2.7 percent in California. However, milk production was down just about everywhere else. It was down 7.6 percent in Texas, 5.2 percent in Washington, and 4.2 percent in Virginia and New York.

This is the first real data showing the milk supply to be slowing down. No doubt this information is part of the reason for the price strength in the dairy futures markets.

The two main futures contracts at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange are Class III and IV. As of January 18, 2001, the market is expecting Class III prices to remain above $10 per cwt through the spring months, and then peak at $12 per cwt by September. For the Class IV prices, the market is expecting prices to jump from $12.08 per cwt in January to $12.85 by April, and then remain above $13 during August through November.

So what do these numbers mean? In general, the "market" is expecting the slow down in the milk supply to continue through the spring months. This would imply strength in the cheese market. Also, the market may be expecting butter stocks to remain relatively tight through 2001, especially by the end of the year. USDA's cold storage report to be issued next week will likely show December stocks drawn down to very low levels. That should add some more strength to butter prices in the near term.

USDA also announced slight changes in the purchase prices for cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk under the dairy price support program. The implied support price for manufacturing milk will remain at $9.90 per cwt for milk at 3.67 percent butterfat. The government supports this price by standing ready to purchase dairy commodities at certain price levels. This is done through the Commodity Credit Corporation, or CCC. The CCC will increase the price of block cheddar and barrel cheese by 0.94 cents to $1.1314 and $1.1014 per pound, respectively. The CCC purchase price for butter will decrease by 1.31 cents to $0.6549 per pound. And, the purchase price for nonfat dry milk will decrease by 0.68 cents per pound to $1.0032 per pound.

Railroads,Wartime, And Long-Term Careers At Stockyards

of alleyways, but few people know their way around the pathways. The commission offices still sprout at odd intervals on the property; however, all but one are deserted.

Hoober's History

John M. Hoober, 84, operated the second-largest marketing agency, J.M. Hoober Inc., at the Lancaster Stockyards.

As a child, Hoober sold lemonade at the stockyards for three cents per glass. Later this time spent at the yards proved helpful in teaching him the intricacies of the stockyard system.

John M. Hoober, Lancaster, not only grew up with the stockyard business but took over his father's business at the Union Stock Yards and became president in 1965, a third-generation commission business. The family's original business was begun in 1985 by Aaron Hoober, one of the early dealers trading on the stock yards.

Hoober was graduated from college during the Depression era and began helping his father in the livestock business, earning $15 a week.

The stockyards processed bulls, cows, feeder and fat cattle, and had a calf and sheep division in a separate barn. All the animals were sold for slaughter purposes, said Hoober. "It was all a barter/trade system," he said.

The stockyards today. Ideally situated as a trading center, the facilities were once the biggest in the East. Animals sold in Lancaster went to Boston, New York, Baltimore, and Washington.

During the "Roaring '20s" the volume of business at Lancaster grew because of lowered trading in eastern metropolis centers. During this era, Lancaster gained the title, "The Largest Stock Yards East of Chicago," according to "History of the Lancaster Stock Yards."

Also according to the book, "Lancaster was the terminal point where drovers, dealers, and commission men met. The business of buying and selling livestock revolved around the individual, thus paper work was at a minimum. In the early days a few desks along the outside wall of the barroom of the hotel sufficed as office space and a notebook or ledger was all that was needed for record of transactions. Business was done on a 'my word is bond' basis."

In the early '30s, said Hoober, "I can remember selling fat cattle for six cents a pound."

During a time of deep drought in the West, said Hoober, "We would ship cattle — they would come in on 40-foot cars carrying 38,000 pounds. Oftentimes there were two or three animals dead on arrival. They shipped them (the cattle) to Lancaster just to get rid of them. Coming off the cars, some would die in the alley coming down."

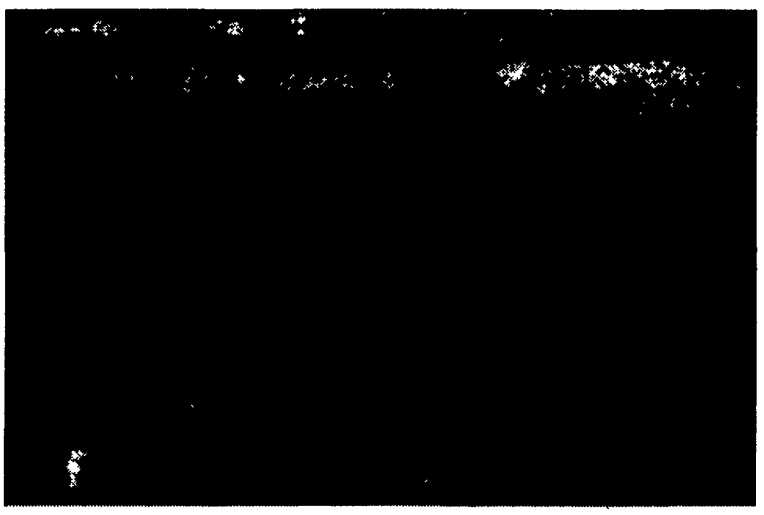
Increasing amounts of hogs, veal calves, and lambs brought the addition of a new small animal building in 1941 at the east end of the yards, the last available space for expansion.



"Local distribution to and from Lancaster was done in large part by droving. Trucking was of no consequence until the '20s. Fat cattle were delivered to the yards on foot and stockers and feeders were distributed to farms in like manner. . . Country dealers purchased or took on consignments of stockers and feeders and started out over the road to sell or deliver on the way. During the several days of droving, in the evenings, the cattle were penned overnight in farm yards or just run into a fenced field along the way," according to "History of the Lancaster Stock Yards."

Lancaster Stockyards

During the Depression, "we sold a set of feeders for two cents a pound, and we had to throw in two animals for free."

The operation at its peak processed $60 million of livestock in a month.

Buyers had the choice of steers from the lots. After a buyer and seller bargained, bartered, compromised, conceded, and finally agreed on a price, the animals were taken to the scales to be weighed, then funneled into a pen designated for animals already sold.

Hoober flew to Montana and the Dakotas several times a year to buy feeder cattle. Accompanying Hoober on trips to buy cattle in the South was his wife Sara, who helped by taking down weights of the cattle that were weighed only eight head at a time.

Stockyard Operation

Monday was the big day at the stockyards. "Employees would come on Sunday evening to sleep overnight and get ready for the cattle. They lined up at 6 a.m. and were paid $3 a day — and that was a lot," said Hoober. "They worked from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. and they were glad to have the job."

The stockyards needed five to 10 extra employees on Monday.

Hoober himself rose at 3:30 a.m. to water and feed the cattle, which had traveled from the West and South over the weekend and move the animals to various pens for exhibition.

After a full day of selling livestock, the office would close at 6 p.m. After closing it was time to start making the market reports to be sent out the next day. Hoober dictated the market to his wife, who typed up the report which would be mimeographed and sent out to subscribers.

Later a market reporter, then a government reporter, would do away with the market letters and Addressograph machine.

"After trading stopped at 4, the alley was set aside to take cattle over the bridge to the Reading Railroad," said Hoober. This route included a trip through the streets of the city of Lancaster. An escort of two drivers in the front, two in the back, and two in the sides directed the animals to the railroad.

"Housewives would come out into the yard with brooms to keep the cattle out of their yards," said Hoover.

J.M. Hoover Inc. moved 20-100 cattle to the railroad a week, plus the other agents which moved their cattle through Prince Street, into the chutes, and onto the railroad cars.

Said Hoober, "The only trouble we had was when we had a wild one."

"Everybody would run up onto their porches," said Sara.

In its heyday, vehicles would line up, wrapped around the building and spilling far along the road adjacent to the stockyard, waiting to unload their animals.

"We had three police officers directing traffic. It was not uncommon for a farmer to bring one calf in the back of his car," said Hoober.

"On a Monday morning, if we didn't have 600 cattle in our pens, the old man would say, 'What's the matter with you guys? You're goofing off.'"

During the '20s, the horse and buggy days, "The Stock Yard Company handled all the railroad business transactions, loading, unloading and the collecting of freight charges along with operating the stock yards. They charged a fee for yarding all livestock, sold the feed, and fed the cattle," according to "History of the Lancaster Stock Yards."

An Accountant's View

Melvin Horn, 97, Willow Street, was an accountant and office manager for the Hoober commissioner's office for 57 years. He began work at the yards in 1925 and worked until 1982.

Beginning his career under Hoober's father, Horn continued working for the Hoobers when the two sons took over and the J.M. Hoober became Hoober Inc.

When he began work, when Hoober was nine years old, Horn earned $25 a week.

"It was not a 40-hour week. There was no such thing. After the market closed, we worked until all the accounts were accounted for, and that might be as late as midnight.

"Everything sold had to be remitted within a certain amount of hours on the day it was completed."

Horn lived in the city of Lancaster. His morning routine included picking up the mail on his way to the stockyards by streetcar, transportation that he rode all week for $1.35.

Later he moved closer to the stockyards and walked to work for many years. "At 65 I was still going strong. I was 79 years old before I fully retired," said Horn. He has lived at Willow Valley Retirement Homes for more than five years.

The 1940s and World War II brought changes to the livestock industry. The black marketeers devised ways of getting around the food stamps during the food rationing, according to Horn.

They paid cash for the animal, so there no record of the transaction, then butcher and sell the beef to hotels or restaurants desperate for beef. According to Horn, some of those sellers did not necessarily believe in the subsidy but would take the cash offered.

"We were legal, we did nothing wrong. It was the small butchers and packers that got around the law by the black market," said Horn.

Ridge Administration Continues Its Commitment To Farmland Preservation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Lt. Gov. Mark Schweiker recently announced the approval of 28 farms, totaling nearly 2,546 acres for preservation.

"The Ridge Administration is proud to say that Pennsylvania preserves farmland at a pace faster than any other state in the nation," Schweiker said. "Thanks to Gov. Ridge's 'Growing Greener' program, we are able to preserve more Pennsylvania farms than ever before. Gov. Ridge takes great pride in our agricultural heritage and wants to take every step to preserve it for future generations."

The Farmland Preservation Program works to preserve and protect Pennsylvania's agricultural land for farm families and future generations of Pennsylvanians.

At the meeting, 13 farms totaling nearly 919 acres from Adams, Chester, and Lancaster counties were preserved under county-owned easement programs.

Following is a list of 15 farms, totaling 1,627 acres approved at the January meeting for easement purchase using state funds, including owner, municipality, acreage, and purchase cost:

Adams County

• David and Mary Margaret Kuhn, Franklin Township, 128 acres, $281,740.38.

Berks County

• Glen and Janet Brubaker, Marion Township, 85 acres, $169,600.

• Calvin and Esther Kurtz, Caernarvon Township, 37 acres, $74,200.

• Scott and Monica Scchler, Upper Tulpehocken, 161 acres, $321,800.

• Gary and Sharon Stoltzfus, Caernarvon Township, 169 acres, $287,400.

• Mark, Nancy and David Wolfskill, Heidelberg Township, 161 acres, $321,000.

"We were not a black market agency, but black marketeers would come and make purchases here," said Hoober.

"It was a good place to work, or I would not have been there 57 years," said Horn. "It was unbelievable, the amount of business transacted in the early 1900s."

To Lancaster From The Midwest

Bill McCoy, 88, Bowmansville, also has a longtime involvement with the stockyards.

"The cattle market was a big business in Lancaster County. It goes back to 1790, with the drovers. In the mid- 1800s the company regularly drew hundreds of fat cattle from the Midwest to the sale. A lot of them went to Philadelphia or the butcher," said McCoy.

The stockyards, noted McCoy, were founded two years after a terrible panic caused cattle prices to plunge drastically. The original structures included a hotel, office, and three acres of pens on land bordered by the railroad.

McCoy came to Lancaster in 1932 and began his own business in 1947 worked with several other commission firms. His father was in business in St. Paul, Minn. McCoy remembers shipping cattle at 78 cents a head per hundredweight for the freight. The freight, commission, and hay bills would then equal the cost of the cattle.

Next issue: Business at the stockyard continues for Charles Diller, who continues to trade under the "Louis Lyons and Son," name. The last article in the series investigates the Diller's business as he operates his business on the historic site.

FSA Expands Storage Facility Loan Program

YORK (York Co.) — The USDA has approved major changes to a loan program, which encourages farmers to construct on farm storage for grain crops. According to D. Wayne Kurtz, director for the York Farm Service Agency (FSA), "USDA has amended rules to include structures that store corn, wheat, barley, or similar crops as other than whole grain. New structures that are upright, bunker-type, horizontal or and have a useful life of at least 10 years are now eligible.'

Additional changes include loans for grain drying and handling equipment, and renovating existing storage and remanufactured oxygen limiting storage structures without an increase in storage capacity required. Flat structures for storing crops such as hay and commercial structures remain ineligible.

Kurtz said "York County Farmer's interested in this program should call the county office before purchasing equipment or starting site preparation." The York County FSA office is located at 100 Pleasant Acres Road in York. Phone (717) 755-2966.

Dairy.com Announces Successful Launch Of E-Market Pilot

DALLAS, Texas — Recently, Dairy.com, an independent, neutral Internet exchange serving the dairy industry, announced the successful launch of its e-market pilot.

The pilot includes several of the founding partners of Dairy.com and will validate the site's functionality prior to opening the site to the entire dairy industry in March 2001.

Seven companies, 66 plants, 69 traders and schedulers are involved in the pilot.

The first trade was transacted Jan. 17 between Land O'Lakes and Suiza Foods. To date, approximately $500,000 of cream has been transacted through the site.

"We are tremendously excited to launch the pilot of Dairy.com's e-market," said Scott Sexton, president of Momentx, the parent company of Dairy.com. "Our team has worked hard to develop a solution to improve the visibility of price and supply in the dairy industry which will deliver real benefits to our customers. We are looking forward to Dairy.com's official launch to the entire industry in March."

As one of the organizations participating in the pilot, Dairy Farmers of America experienced Dairy.com's benefits firsthand. John Wilson, corporate vice president, marketing/economic analysis at Dairy Farmers of America, commented, "The Dairy.com team leveraged the expertise of industry veterans to build a site that addresses the dairy industry's unique business needs. We are very impressed with the technology. It is easy to use and will improve the way we currently do business."

Dairy.com is on schedule to launch its first release in March 2001 with live trading of select commodities including milk and cream, logistics estimating tools, and industry-focused content. In addition, Dairy.com is working aggressively to build out additional functionality for future releases which will include spot and long-term trading of other dairy commodities including butter, cheese, and powders as well as direct replenishment and farm management tools.

Dairy.com is the first business-to-business online vertical exchange focused specifically on serving the entire U.S. dairy industry. Dairy.com is an independent neutral company whose services and tools will be open to all dairy industry participants. Dairy.com's mission is to provide comprehensive Internet tools to help the dairy industry create a better way of doing business. Five key functional platforms are under development for the site: a dairy commodity exchange, dairy farmer services, information tools, supply chain management tools and industry-focused community and content. Dairy.com was founded by a broad consortium of leading dairy industry organizations representing all segments of the industry — farmer owned cooperatives, milk, ice cream and yogurt processors and cheese manufacturers. For more information visit www.dairy.com.

Momentx is an e-market solution provider for the dairy and food and beverage industries and operates the INC2inc and Dairy.com e-markets. For more information, visit www.momentx.com

Christmas Tree Management Short Course Feb. 21-22

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's 2001 Christmas Tree Management Short Course will be here at The Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel Wednesday, Feb. 21 and Thursday, Feb. 22.

The course is designed to help growers adopt the latest pest control, production and business management practices, according to Rick Bates, co-chair and assistant professor of ornamental horticulture. Participants will receive a hand lens and short course manual. Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture pesticide recertification credits also will be available to those completing the course.

Wednesday morning sessions focus on seedling quality issues. Highlights include the importance and future of Christmas tree genetics, establishing seed orchards, producing the right-sized planting stock and maintaining post-harvest quality of planting stock.

Wednesday afternoon sessions focus on establishing new plantings, with discussions on using growth promoters, designing fields, planting practices and weed control.

Thursday morning sessions feature marketing and business management. Topics include creative marketing, liability issues, analyzing your business's financial health and managing insect and mite pests.

To request registration materials and a detailed schedule, call (814) 865-8301, or visit the Conferences and Short Courses World Wide Website at http://conferences.cas.psu.edu/. For more information on conference content, call Rick Bates at (814) 863-2198.

A registration fee of $170 includes all workshops, instructional materials, breaks and lunches for Feb. 21 and 22. Registration for one day is $100. Registration deadline is Feb. 9, 2001.

Dairy Of Distinction Applications Due April 15

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry. Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm.

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

Roadside judging will take place in May. Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings; neat landscaping, ditches, roads, and lanes; and well-maintained fences. They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals, the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management.

Winning farms will be notified in late June. Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards.

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at MOConnor@das.psu.edu.

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 750 dairy farms. The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont. Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications.

Young Farmers Attend National Institute

HAMBURG (Berks Co.) — The 34th National Young Farmers Educational Institute was conducted in Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 28 to Dec. 2, 2000.

About 35 people from Pennsylvania attended and 18 different states were represented.

The Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association toured different counties and saw how the cattle graze hundreds of miles away from home. Also at tour: The Frances E. Warren Air Base, Holly Sugar (where they take sugar beets and make sugar to deliver in all 50 states), Schlagel Manufacturing (where they do metal name signs for mailboxes and ranches), and shopping in downtown Cheyenne.

The next three institutes are: Falls Church, Va., Nov. 28-Dec. 1, 2001; Oklahoma City, Okla., in 2002; and Indianapolis, Ind. in 2003.

The state convention will be Feb. 6-8 in Greensburg, Pa.

Farm Safety Knowledge Put To Test

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — 4-H members and FFA members from across the state gathered last week at the Family Living and Agricultural Learning Center to participate in the Farm Safety Quiz Bowl at the 85th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Teams of four competed against one another answering questions about equipment safety, animal safety, fire safety, and general safety on the farm. The contest was divided into two divisions FFA and 4-H. Awards were presented by Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes.

First place in the 4-H division went to the Cumberland County Team made up of Mary Strasbaugh, daughter of Tim and Glenda Strasbaugh of Mechanicsburg; Aaron Cornman, son of Steve and Debbie Cornman of Boiling Springs; Mark Fulton, son of Robert and Becky Fulton of Shippensburg; and Brian Nailor, son of Dennis and Joanne Nailor of Mechanicsburg.

Potter County was second and Clearfield and Franklin counties were third and fourth respectively.

In the FFA Division, Berlin Brothersvalley FFA team placed first. Mifflinburg Area FFA took second place, Upper Dauphin FFA and Middleburg FFA were third and fourth respectively.

The Farm Safety Quiz Bowl is one of the many FFA and 4-H sponsored activities at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show. 4-H teams qualified last August at the Ag Progress Days Farm Safety Quiz Bowl to compete in this event.

tour counties. At the state pageant, Melinda was selected to represent the whole state.

She finds that her non-farming friends are supportive and receptive to her reign as dairy princess. "They often give me recipes and ideas," Mindy said.

Being a full-time college student and the state dairy princess is not without its perks but also has drawbacks. Mindy's grade point average has dropped a bit since she's taken on her new role.

"It's a sacrifice, but I think it is worth it," Mindy said of not making the dean's list the past semester and of reducing her workload to 12 credits this semester.

Mindy is pleased how receptive Bloomsburg University has been in accommodating her schedule. One of the requirements for dairy princesses is classroom presentations to elementary school students.

Because Mindy is pursuing childhood education, the school has made arrangements for her to use school dairy promotions as credit toward an internship and toward independent studies. This requires Mindy to treat each promotion as a classroom teaching session.

She writes lesson plans and her presentations are evaluated by the classroom teachers. On occasion, her college adviser accompanies her to the presentations to evaluate her teaching and speaking presentations.

Mindy thrives on the opportunity to work with children. She said, "It is sad how little most children know about agriculture. But I love helping them understand where milk comes from and the importance of drinking milk."

Although the school district in which she lived did not offer an ag program or FFA, Mindy gained a lot of agriculture knowledge through the 4-H dairy club. She also found her involvement in high school drama club and participation in a speech contest sponsored by the local Elk's Club gave her a solid basis in speaking before crowds — which she must often do as the state dairy princess.

"If I really believe in something, it's easy to talk," Mindy said. "Otherwise it sounds fake."

For that reason, Mindy's speeches have proven effective. At the state pageant, she was a presentation winner for her speech, which paid tribute to her father, who keeps things running smoothly on the farm despite never having a day where something doesn't go wrong.

"Why run ragged for so little return?" she asked of a farmer's quest to farm despite dwindling farm prices, weather havoc, and never-ending repairs.

"Perhaps because farming is in his blood or that he sees blood, sweat, and blisters as battle wounds of his lifetime dream," Mindy said of her dad, "who each evening ignores his tired body to get one more thing done around the farm.

"I have the greatest admiration for my dad. For this reason I would like to declare Farmer Appreciation Day, because men like my dad make me proud to say, 'I'm a farmer's daughter,'" Mindy said.

Unlike many of the dairy princesses who previously filled roles as dairy maids and dairy alternates, this is the first year Mindy has participated in dairy promotion.

"It's something my grandmother always wanted me to do, but the time didn't seem right until this year. Since we put up the new facility, I was more involved with the dairy end. Although I was busy with many activities, I thought if I don't try, I'll never know.

"The way my parents raised me, the lessons I learned, and the experience I gained through high school activities have all made me what I am today."

Melinda has filled leadership positions in many organizations such as Red Cross volunteer, an assistant coach of the Milton Little League, school tutor, Student Council, drama club, marching band, choir, and various 4-H clubs.

"Those responsibilities kept me accountable for what needs to be done," she said. Her involvement in so many different organizations also helped her with time management and goal setting.

When the Wolfe family planned their farm expansion, they were met with some opposition from a few concerned citizens who feared farming odors and devaluation of property values. But the concerns were alleviated by explaining the measures taken to reduce odors by installing a manure pit and explaining the expansion process.

Mindy's mother Rinda works as a school secretary but helps with milking on weekends and summer months.

Growing up on the farm, Melinda said she learned hands-on experience, but her involvement in the dairy princess program has taught her more about the dairy industry, new technologies, and the problems that face the dairy industry.

"I love what I'm doing. I have a great time doing it," Melinda said.

This is the third generation on the farm. Back row is Mindy, Randy, and Deanna. Front, Taylor and Eric.

Mindy is a working princess, both on and off the farm.

Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Melinda Wolfe is proud of the dairy industry and most enjoys teaching children that milk comes from cows, not supermarkets.

Wayne County Dairy Day Feb. 16

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — All area dairy producers and their families are reminded that the 23rd Annual Wayne County Dairy Day has been set for Friday, Feb. 16, from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. here at the Honesdale High School.

The annual dairy day will feature commercial exhibits by area agribusinesses, financial lenders, government agencies, farm equipment dealers, feed and nutrition businesses, dairy and milk cooperatives, and AI breeding cooperatives and others.

Dairy Day will also feature timely and valuable dairy related educational presentations by Penn State Cooperative Extension staff members, industry resource people, Penn State University extension specialists, and others.

Some of the dairy related topics to be addressed at this year's dairy day include milk marketing, the consequences of insufficient dry matter in dairy rations, alternative forages to consider for dairy herds, and conservation programs for area dairy farms.

The milk, cheese, and ice cream bars will be another feature of this upcoming Wayne County Dairy Day as well as the noontime lunch provided to area dairy farm families courtesy of the exhibitors.

Some health screening, for area dairy farm families, will be offered by The Wayne Memorial Hospital, Wayne Health, and Pennsylvania Department of Health.

Wayne County dairy princess and dairy maids will also be at dairy day with milk and dairy product promotions and nutrition information.

Also, a series of door prizes will be awarded to lucky dairy farm participants.

Bedford Dairy Day Feb. 8

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — 2001 Dairy Day is scheduled Thursday, Feb. 8 here at the Martinsburg Memorial Park.

The free daylong event includes four guest speakers covering topics such as "self-evaluation" tips to identify dairy profit robbers, cash flow management, and reproduction management. The final presentation targets profitability with "Do You Really Know What You're Feeding Your Cows?"

Dairy Day is hosted jointly by Bedford Farm Bureau and Purina Mills. Speakers and topics are designed to help dairy producers become more efficient and profitable. The day begins with registration and refreshments, sponsored by AgChoice Farm Credit, at 9:30 a.m. and runs through 3 p.m. Lunch will be provided courtesy of Purina Mills and Bedford Farm Bureau.

Please make reservations by Feb. 6 with any of the following:

Ben Wilson, (814) 932-9094; Andy Krug, (814) 674-8750; Rob Hinton, (814) 932-3676; Doug Kennedy, (814) 932-9046; Russ Blew, (814) 932-9185.

You may also make reservations at any of the Bedford Farm Bureau locations by calling (814) 623-6194, (814) 766-3328, or (814) 652-2313.

NFU 99th Anniversary Convention March 2-5

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Hundreds of the nation's family farmers and ranchers will gather in Rochester, N.Y., March 2-5, for National Farmers Union's (NFU) 99th anniversary convention. The theme of this year's convention is "Strong Traditions, New Innovations."

"A new Congress signals a fresh start for the development of family farm and ranch policy," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU. "While some of the names and the balance of power are new, we face many of the same challenges that rural America saw as we began the last year. This year, we will gather to build on the momentum we created over the past year to address issues such as concentration, low prices, and the failed farm law. We will also share with each other the information and expertise we have gained through our efforts to serve farm and ranch families throughout the year."

Saturday, March 3 will feature two important discussions. The morning discussion will address needed policy changes to the 1996 farm law. The afternoon will feature a farm leader roundtable where participants will discuss not only important policy, market and structural realities faced by farmers, but also important social and community concerns of rural citizens.

Sunday, March 4 will feature several afternoon forums that will address the role of faith communities in the current rural crisis and industrial concentration in agriculture and the food system.

Delegates will consider and adopt the 2001 NTU policy program for the coming year on Monday, March 5. NFU's policy committee met in Minneapolis in December to begin consideration of 2001 policy. The committee will offer its proposals to the full delegation at the convention. The day will culminate with a Bon Voyage reception and dance.

What's The Right Age To Wean Calves?

W. Mark Hilton, D.V.M. and Ron Lemenager
Purdue University

A five-year study in Nebraska looked at three weaning ages in beef calves: 150 days (early), 210 days (normal) or 270 days (late).

If calves were retained through the feedlot, the profit per calf was $75.36 (early), $62.16 (normal) and $10.09 (late). If calves were adjusted to the same fat depth at slaughter, the early and normal weaned calves returned the same profit while the late weaned calves netted about $35 less than the other groups.

The cattle in this study were Angus, Hereford, Simmental and Gelbvieh.

The reason the profit was significantly less for the late weaned groups was due to poorer cow condition scores during the winter and therefore higher winter feed costs as well as very poor calf growth during the final 60-120 days of nursing.

The early weaned calves gained 2.9#/day from weaning to 60 days post-weaning and 3.5#/day the next 60 days on feed. The normal weaned calves gainly only 1.7#/day the last 60 days on the cow, but jumped to 3.3#/day from weaning to 60 days post-weaning.

The dramatic difference in gain was in the late weaned calves. These calves gained only 1.0#/day their last 60 days on the cow and weighed 222# less at 270 days of age compared to the early weaned calves and 139# less than normal weaned calves.

The early weaning option proved to be the poorest choice because of lighter sale weight when the calves were sold right off the cow.

The early weaned calves were slaughtered at 1146# and 0.52" fat depth. This is fatter than industry goals, but the early weaned calves did grade 94 percent choice or greater. These calves were 50 percent British and 50 percent Continental genetics.

So, this data combined with early weaning trials at Purdue and other schools would show early weaning to be a positive strategy for calves of greater than 50 percent Continental genetics to improve percent choice and improve cow condition score through the winter. Conversely, high percent British cattle may become too fat and have lower carcass weights if subjected to early weaning.

When the IQ+BEEF program was being developed, we were asked about the option of vaccinating calves, but leaving them on the cow for an additional time and then selling the unweaned calves.

The reason this option was not adopted was because of increased sickness in the unweaned calves when they reach the feedlot and the hypothesis that they would have extremely poor gains while nursing cow later in lactation.

This study supports the IQ+BEEF program and confirms that adding weight is more economical (profitable) when calves are weaned and fed grain post-weaning compared to late weaning of calves.

In conclusion, avoid selling calves right off the cow at 150 days of age. Also avoid weaning calves at 270 days of age (due to poor gain on late lactation cows) no matter if you sell at that time or retain to the feedlot.

When forage is plentiful, wean calves between 150 days and then feed them for 60-120 days.

Holstein Association USA Announces Resignation Of Executive Secretary CEO

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Holstein Association USA President James N. "Bud" Leckie announced the resignation of Stephen R. Kerr, executive secretary and CEO of the association.

"Steve has led us well for nearly 10 years and, although we're disappointed, we understand his desire to pursue new opportunities," said Leckie. "The association has a forward looking strategic plan and is in good shape financially. Given the foundation that Steve has helped us build, I'm extremely optimistic about the association's future."

Kerr is credited for developing a comprehensive strategic plan for the association's dairy business to lessen its reliance on traditional markets and increase opportunities in other dairy markets. He also inaugurated an e-commerce subsidiary (Insinc USA) to diversify the association's business operations and develop new, higher margin opportunities.

Restructuring the financial strategy of the association, Kerr maximized the return on the association's nondairy assets in order to secure its future as a membership organization and has eliminated the association's debt.

While re-engineering the association's core products and services to reflect changes in the marketplace, he developed a highly professional and entrepreneurial staff with the necessary technical, marketing, and administrative skills to manage a sophisticated data service company in a competitive environment.

Leckie has scheduled an additional board meeting in three weeks to begin the search for a new CEO. However, the Holstein Association Board of Directors has asked Kerr to help in this transition and hopes that he will be available in the future for consultation on special projects. Kerr has agreed to the Board's request and plans to be available through April 2001.

Kerr is a Vermont native and graduate from Middlebury college. He is a former agricultural aide to the Honorable Senator James Jeffords and resides in Westminster, Vt.

Pennsylvania Grazing And Forage Conference

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference to be held Feb. 28 and March 1 will feature numerous presentations and discussions focusing on grazing and forages. This conference is co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and the Pennsylvania Grazing Research and Education Center.

Plan to attend the conference to learn more about watering systems for your grazing livestock, pasture establishment and renovation, dealing with the summer shortage of forage or low cost milking parlors. The conference will be conducted in Grantville at the Holiday Inn.

In addition to these topics, many more will be presented by a wide array of speakers. The keynote speaker will be Mr. Ben Bartlett, a grazier as well as a dairy and livestock agent at Michigan State University Extension and one of the country's leading experts on pasture watering systems.

Bartlett is involved with livestock production and has traveled the world over to set up beef cattle operations. He has worked in Korea and Japan and most recently in Argentina. In his travels, he has been willing to "look around the corner" for new ideas and technologies and to bring that technology home to America, where he has applied it to livestock operations. He will be bringing his vast experience and knowledge on watering systems to Pennsylvania and to share with the audience. Ben will also provide the keynote address for the conference with a talk entitled "Are you serious about grazing?"

On Wednesday evening, those who are attending the conference will have a unique opportunity to hear about and ask questions of several graziers wives about changes in family lifestyles. Here is the chance to hear "the rest of the story" about this relaxed lifestyle and maybe even see if it is for you and your family. There will also be other informal discussions taking place on Wednesday evening with many of the days' presenters. There will be plenty of time to ask questions and discuss with fellow farmers current concerns for the farm or the grazing industry.

As part of the conference, there will be a trade show where company representative will be on hand to showcase what is new with forages and grazing technologies.

No Buyers, So Tobacco Auction Season Ends

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Dennis Hess, manager of the Pennsylvania Tobacco Marketing Association auction, announced Thursday this week that the tobacco auction season is over.

Hess, in a recorded telephone message at the auction at the Solanco Fairgrounds, said the auction "is done for the year because of a lack of buyers."

He noted, "For the time being, we have suspended all sales." However, the association was required to rent the facility for two months, until the end of February. "If something does turn up, we can start up instantaneously and we will continue to try and get something going," he said. "Things do not look very promising."

Hess said he'll be at the warehouse in the morning beginning next week. Buyers and growers can call him at (717) 786-4389.

PA TOBACCO MARKETING ASSO.

NO MORE SALES SCHEDULED due to lack of buyers. Warehouse is rented until end of Feb. If something develops that we can have sale again, we will run ads in Lancaster Farming to notify our members.

NOTE: All association members and past association members that have not yet sent in their money that they owe for selling privately, must do so immediately. 3¢/lb. for this year and last year's crop, 1¢/lb. for 1998 crop. Send to: PTMA, 870 Clay Rd., Lititz, PA 17543

Mid-Atlantic Dairy Management Conference March 7-8

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Do you want to hear how successful dairy producers have organized and structured their dairy business for profitability? Are you ready to move from benchmarking and goal setting to action?

Do you need ideas for motivating and communicating with your employees?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Dairy Management Conference is for you.

The planning committee of dairy producers, industry leaders, and university personnel has scheduled a conference with the goal of providing leading-edge information and ideas to progressive dairy producers and industry leaders in the Mid-Atlantic region.

The early registration discount ends Feb. 14, so make your plans today to attend this leading edge conference at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill, March 7-8.

Come to hear dairy producers and their agribusiness advisers share how they are working together to implement competitive business strategies that are working for them.

Dr. John Smith from Kansas State University will open the conference with his remarks on dairy industry trends and opportunities. The first session will feature Tom Craig, owner of Murmac Farms in Bellefonte, and his advisers, Mark Stephenson from the Cornell Program on Dairy Markets and Policy, and James Peck from Consul Agr, Inc. and how they are working together and organizing and structuring the dairy business for profitability.

Dairy Farm Computer Accounting Meetings Set

YORK (York Co.) — Farm management decision-making in today's dairy economy requires accurate, current information to make informed choices.

Computerized accounting provides the tools to process information on a regular basis so th rrent information is readily ailable.

. ea dairy producers interested in learning computerized accounting skills are encouraged to attend a four-part meeting series designed to improve and standardize dairy farm accounting procedures. The hands-on computer training sessions will be offered in Adams and Franklin counties during February.

Computerized farm accounting concepts will be demonstrated using QuickBooks Pro for Windows. Instruction includes basic operation of the accounting system, special farm accounting issues, and enterprise accounting. Report demonstrations include cash and accrual profit-and-loss statements, budget reports, payroll and employment tax reports, and determining cost of production per unit. Participants receive a sample file with a chart of accounts setup and ready to use for their farm.

Tim Beck, regional dairy program coordinator, will instruct two days of the workshop that will focus on specific computer skills and knowledge required to operate the accounting system. Participants will practice general program operation including data entry, setting up the program and printing reports. Specific topics to be addressed include introduction to software, setting up the program, basic operation of the accounting system, and generating reports.

Brad Hilty, Dairy Alliance information management specialist, will teach dairy accounting practices during two days of the course.

To properly analyze and benchmark financial information, producers need to consistently categorize and record transactions regardless of the accounting software used to maintain farm records.

Working with industry financial leaders throughout Pennsylvania, Hilty has developed a standardized chart of accounts to record dairy information in a consistent manner. During two days of the program, participants will learn to use this chart of accounts and will receive instruction on developing and interpreting reports.

Topics to be covered include standardized chart of accounts, understanding financial statements, special accounting issues, enterprise accounting, and benchmarking and analyzing data.

Area locations and dates are Feb. 5, 7, 9, 12 — Adams County extension office and Feb. 19, 21, 23, 26 — Franklin County extension office.

All sessions are conducted from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the extension office in each county. Contact the local extension office for directions to the meeting site.

Registration fee for the four-day sessions is $75 for each participant. Lunch is on your own. The workshops are limited to the first 10 participants because of the availability of laptop computers to be used during the sessions.

To register, contact the customer service desk at the York County extension office, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402, (717) 840-7408, fax (717) 755-5968, or e-mail Tim Beck at tbeck@psu.edu.

The Pennsylvania Beef Council Reviews 2000, Moves Ahead In 2001

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

GRANTVILLE and MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Recently the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC) conducted its annual business meeting at the Holiday Inn, Grantville.

Approximately 80 people attended the event which included comments by Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes, a treasurer's report, and seating of newly-elected directors for the Beef Council's board.

Changes to the recently-completed auditors report were approved for the revised financial policy manual. Program updates completed the evening.

During the meeting Paul Slayton, executive director, pointed out that the Beef Council's ability to best use checkoff dollars hinges upon alliances and partnerships.

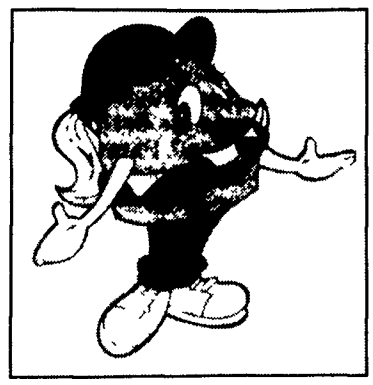
"The Council is reliant upon organizations. We work with the same dollar amount that we had 13 years ago when we first started," he said.

The Beef Council is now aided by contracts and institutions such as Penn State, American Veal association, and other industry partners.

According to Slayton, PBC administrative expenses cost eight percent of the total revenue. Expenses are reconciled to contracts and programs such as veal issues management, veal quality assurance, dairy quality assurance, satisfying consumer expectations, or food safety.

This year has brought change and growth to the beef industry and, consequently, the Beef Council.

Long-range planning will be key in PBC's schedule for the upcoming year. Change may be paced by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association's (NCBA) "Beef Industry Planning Group," a group that met three years ago to decide long-range goals in the beef industry. One of these goals was to stop the decline of beef demand.



Food safety mascot "Patty Melt" has visited more than 25,000 students at more than 145 Pennsylvania schools. The program includes a teacher kit with additional food safety activities for the classroom. "Patty" won first place at the Region V Best of National Agri Marketing Awards contest, the first national award won by the Beef Council.

"Two years later, demand is improving," said Slayton. "The same group of industry leaders met in 2000 and outlined another long-range plan. This long- range plan, if it's as insightful and accurate as the last one, could really impact the beef industry in the next three years."

Part of this plan is the group's goal of increasing beef demand by six percent by 2004. The goals focus on key industry trends such as changing consumer demographics, globalization, and the information age. The group also looked at animal handling practices and welfare.

Slayton puts emphasis on this long-range plan because he believes that "it is important that the beef industry be aware of trends and be ready for them."

Slayton attended meetings at NCBA headquarters in Denver, Colo. in January to see how the long- range plan impacts the Beef Council's programs and what the council can do to dovetail the long-range plans into Pennsylvania's schedule and programs.

Promotions Director Carrie Bomgardner's past year at the Beef Council has included innumerable contacts with the retail end of the beef business, as Bomgardner and staff introduced more than 340 grocery stores to the Beef Made Easy (BME) program.

The program redesigns the meat case by reorganizing the case by cooking method. On-pack cooking instruction labels, rail strips, a back room poster, and educational brochures are color-coded to make buying decisions easier.

This coming year brings new life to the BME program. "The whole program is getting a facelift, something to look for," said Bomgardner. New posters and brochures will move into stores such as Giant, Giant Eagle, Weis, Acme, and Pathmark this January. In addition the BME program will include an advertisement planner with clip art so a retailer can tie it in with the sales circular.

Product sampling is one way for PBC to introduce beef and veal cuts to the public. The staff sampled products at producer events, the Pittsburgh Zoo, Ag Progress Days, and other farm-city days and open houses across the state.

The Council handed out samples of "heat and eat" and value-added beef at the Farm Show this year. In addition, staff distributed coupons for eight Harrisburg-area restaurants offering specials on steak entrees.

In March, a three-day "Book and the Cook" show provided an opportunity to "talk up beef's message," said Bomgardner, with about 20,000 people attending the recipe and cooking event. Since Philadelphia is a strong market for veal, veal bacon and meatballs were given out at the show.

Food safety mascot "Patty Melt," after her successful tours teaching food safety to 145 schools across the commonwealth, will be changing direction in the new year. "In the coming year we're looking for ways to market the program," said Bomgardner, who is considering making "Patty" available as a service project opportunity to college students.

The Council has also co-sponsored a meal this year with the Philadelphia Eagles football team, providing approximately 350 women with precooked prime rib. The women were taught the basics of football at the "NFL 101" dinner.

In the coming year Bomgardner plans to introduce the foodservice industry to value-added new beef products through a Beef 202 course for chefs and restaurant owners. Participants will learn how to use the time-saving, consistent precooked products.

Producer productivity is also a key issue for the Beef Council.

Promotions Director Carrie Bomgardner worked this year to put the "Beef Made Easy" program in place in 340 grocery stores across the commonwealth. The program designed a consumer-friendly meat case by reorganizing it by cooking method. On-pack cooking instruction labels, rail strips, a back room poster and educational brochures are color-coded to make buying decisions easier.

Six billboards were placed in major metropolitan markets of Pennsylvania this year. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture partnered with the Beef Council to make the advertisements possible.

The "Blueprint for Success" producer-oriented program was unveiled in April.

Coordinated by Wendall Landis, the program is a team effort between the Council and Penn State University. The three-year program provides cattle feeders with an education program meant to increase the beef value and improve profitability.

Landis spent the first several months of the program "visiting feedlots throughout Pennsylvania and working with producers one-on-one, trying to collect information for benchmarking," he said. Information will be compiled to a database for producers to be able to compare themselves to a statewide average.

"The main goal this past year was to get data and familiarize the rest of the industry, such as feed, pharmaceutical, marketing groups, auction barns, and order buyers with who I am and about the program, and building relationships."

The past year PBC applied for, and received in October, a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) for a Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) program. Wendall sees the BQA program as building on the Blueprint program.

The quality assurance program will be the focus of the first six months of the year for Landis.

"It is a tight schedule starting now. We're unveiling the quality assurance and certification program and we have until June to have it completed for PDA," said Landis.

He is working to develop the handbook in time for the first quality assurance seminar at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center on Jan. 30.

The quality assurance program will consist of not only the seminar meeting with the handbook and a quality assurance exhibit but also a hands-on, chute-side session to demonstrate injection-site, implanting, feed mixing, and deworming techniques. He plans to conduct seminars at 5-8 locations throughout the state.

The BQA program also includes comprehensive a point-of-purchase survey in grocery stores. The survey will question consumers about their perception of a quality assurance program.

Several new staff members have joined PBC in the past year.

Holly Marshall, industry relations and compliance director, joined the Beef Council in May.

Besides helping with the Patty Melt campaign, Marshall is helping Landis with BEEF 201, a course for beef industry representatives. Participants will follow cattle from a live evaluation to fabrication of the carcass, according to Marshall, "to give an idea of the different sectors" which contribute to the final beef product.

Veal Programs Coordinator Laura Kwisnek joined PBC staff in July. Kwisnek is continuing the certification programs previously begun at the Beef Council office. At the Farm Show, Kwisnek plans to offer veal samples and have a 6- and 16-month-old calf for public education purposes, along with a myth-versus-fact backboard.

Kwisnek as also organizing a delegate session for the American Veal Association to take place in March in Ohio. She will also travel to Wisconsin in February to a producer trade show and conference, where she will be helping to conduct Veal Quality Assurance seminars.

Paula Leuenberger, nutrition and health director, is a registered dietitian. "Her employment here is building partnerships with professional doctors, dietitians, and other groups," said Slayton.

One example of this partnership is the Council's work with the Central Pennsylvania Blood Bank. "We will work with them at events in this coming year, enabling us to get our message out to consumers," said Slayton.

Pa. Landscape, Nursery Conference Feb. 6-8

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — People associated with the ornamental horticulture industry can glean information and ideas at the 56th annual Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Conference, Feb. 6-8 here at The Penn Stater Conference Center Hotel.

The conference, sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension, the Penn State department of horticulture, and the Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Association, will feature workshops on a variety of topics.

"Entrepreneurs and professionals can find answers to business problems, discover new marketing strategies and make contacts," said Jim Sellmer, assistant professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Participants also will hear about the issues impacting the industry today, such as nutrient management, invasive plants and e-commerce."

New happenings this year include expanded pre-conference workshops, a job fair, a silent auction and crew chief training tracks in landscape maintenance and landscape installation.

The week begins with seven concurrent pre-conference workshops on Tuesday, Feb. 6. Preconference sessions focus on labor resources, advanced computer-assisted design, advanced Web design, insect and mite diagnosis and management in the landscape, training for owners, tips for winning promotions, and pot-in-pot nursery production.

The conference begins Wednesday, Feb. 7 at 8:15 a.m. with the talk, "Industry Trends: What Changes Are Affecting All of Us?" by Todd Davis, editor, Nursery Manager Pro Magazine. Four concurrent sessions will be conducted throughout the day.

Topics covered in Wednesday morning sessions include the changing face of the American gardener; tree and shrub fertilization; the basics of container production technology; the perks and pitfalls of e-commerce; marketing you, your relationships, and your business; putting on a big show with tender perennials and tropicals; container configurations and alternatives for production; and employee discipline.

Wednesday afternoon topics include keeping garden center annuals looking good; estimating costs to guarantee profits; specific growing aspects of container production; web and e-commerce issues; containers and garden ornaments; landscape lighting; nutrient management in ornamentals; perennials to die for; post-plant care of landscape plants; exploring the use of plant growth regulators with perennials; and collecting outstanding debts.

The conference resumes on Thursday, Feb. 8, at 8:15 a.m. with the talk, "Motivation for the New Season," by Clyde Vadner, senior management consultant at Kraft Associates in Exton. Again, four concurrent sessions will be held throughout the day.

Thursday morning topics include using the web to find resources and answer questions, sales skills for green contractors, nursery challenges and possible solutions, underused small trees, creating powerful promotions, traits of a successful landscape contracting business, IPM in the nursery, and exciting new ornamental trees and shrubs.

Thursday afternoon topics focus on Pa. Gardener Selects; classic trees, shrubs, and perennials for the landscape; using constructed wetlands to manage nursery runoff; efforts to develop a national early warning, rapid assessment, and rapid response system for invasive plants in the U.S.; working with the news media; water quality in your water gardens; compost utilization in the nursery and landscape; and gardening in harmony with butterflies and birds.

Professionals interested in becoming a Pennsylvania Certified Horticulturalist (PCH) can take the PCH Exam on Thursday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Crew chief training is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 7 and 8, from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. This year's training is organized into installation and maintenance tracks and includes new techniques as well as time-tested methods.

Registration fee for pre-conference workshops is $65 before Jan. 31, except for the 1 p.m. workshops, which are $40. After Jan. 31, add $10 to the workshop fee. Registration fee is $150 for both conference days, or $85 for a single day, with fees raised after Jan. 31 to $170 and $95 respectively. Crew chief training is $150 for both days, or $85 for a single day, with fees raised after Jan. 31 to $170 and $95 respectively.

Registration forms are available at the Penn State conferences and short courses World Wide Web site at http://conferences.cas.psu.edu/. Registrations can be submitted online, faxed to (814) 865-7050, or mailed to Pennsylvania Landscape and Nursery Conference, The Pennsylvania State University, 306 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802-2601. For more information, call (814) 865-8301.

Promote Rural America

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) commended Sen. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., for setting priorities for the 107th Congress that will restore fairness to farming and strengthen rural communities.

"Senator Daschle continues to be a leader on issues affecting rural Americans," said Leland Swenson, president of NFU, "He has a keen understanding of the elements that make for a prosperous and sustainable rural economy and farm culture. His initiatives will help our farm and ranch families and small towns share the prosperity that has visited most of America in recent years."

Daschle's legislation, the Securing a Future for Independent Agriculture Act, S. 20, will address an array of issues that are of primary importance to family farmers and ranchers as well as the rest of rural America. His comprehensive policy, among other things, includes a fair competition act for the agriculture and food industries, makes agriculture a top trading priority, requires that production contracts be fair and understandable, mandates country-of-origin labeling for food, equalizes loan rates upward, enhances America's commitment to food safety, and promotes rural economic development.

Additional, Daschle, with several other Senate colleagues, offered a resolution as a basic guide for developing this year's farm policy. It calls on Congress to enact a new farm bill this year, set aside in the budget funds sufficient to provide a safety net for farm income, ensure that farm-related payments are distributed promptly and fairly, and provide in the budget adequate funds for rural development, conservation, research, food safety and nutrition.

"Sen. Daschle is starting the new Congress off on the right foot," said Swenson. "His legislation sets an important tone for the upcoming policy debate that can bring needed changes to current farm policy this year and build on the values of rural America."

Vineyard Labor, Marketing, Management Comprise SEGA Meeting

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Finding enough quality labor and dealing with labor issues make for an "ongoing struggle every single day," said Steven Brown.

Brown, of Indian Springs Vineyard, Woodstock, Va., addressed labor and vineyard financial management issues during the Penn State-sponsored Southeast Grape Industry Association of Pennsylvania (SEGA) annual meeting.

About 41 vineyard managers and agri-industry representatives attended the meeting at the end of November at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

Brown employs Mexicans at his 70-plantable acre vineyard, comprising two areas in Woodstock and Upperville, Va.

His employees, Brown said, are the "hardest workers and the loyalist people in the world," he said. But others in the industry don't want to face the issues that accompany labor needs.

Too many in the industry "are burying their heads" about the issue, said Brown. "The labor issue is something that a lot of us — many of us — are just hanging on about."

Attracting labor includes setting up a system of incentives: But there are legal issues, including guaranteeing seasonal housing (a fixed cost), establishing pay rates, determining incentive rewards, and other factors.

Brown says he pays his workers a range of $1 to $1.25 per lug; with other incentives tagged on depending on terrain, type of grapes, and other factors.

Mark Chien, wine grape agent in Lancaster, said that workers he was familiar with on other vineyards across the country got about 4 cents per pound of grapes picked. Because of the individual worker's productivity, some could earn $20 an hour, and some $8-$9.

"But you have to pay more than minimum wage," said Chien. "That is the law."

The labor issue detracts some from turning to growing grapes as a business. "They have to understand it is a labor-intensive business," he said. "Some are scared of labor."

Steve Bogash, horticultural agent for Cumberland, Franklin, and Adams counties, spoke about the importance of the "grease" that moves the machinery of doing business.

Bogash, who grew up in an area where people were invited to taste wine and help with the harvest, looked upon the harvesting as "entertainment."

Bogash, who ran a grape-growing business in central Maryland, said that labor was the "biggest hassle" of the job. He managed 18 full-time.

They were great employees "when I could keep them from being occupied with their personal issues," said Bogash. They bring the "baggage" of their own personal life to work.

For those who want to attract employees and keep good working relationships, Bogash said that growers should remember they "don't sell a product," he said. "What we sell, day in and day out, is ourselves."

Bogash noted the importance of keeping a "relationship balance sheet" and a system of rewards. For the mechanic, give them a case of beer or a bottle of wine. By taking care of those that help keep the machinery of the business going, "you build up that level of trust," he said.

"Wine bottles offer an incredible degree of grease," he said. "Keep showing some level of appreciation."

And break bread with customers, noted Bogash. Keep the lines of communication open and make sure you deliver the quality of product you promised when you said you wound.

Bogash said he would rather meet face-to-face than teleconference. Invite clients over for dinner, promote your product on a Website, and build up credibility.

And keep the work fun.

"If you're not having fun at what you do, get out as quickly as possible," he said.

Steven Brown, of Indian Springs Vineyard, said he installed a 6-foot deer fence, which cost about $500 per acre. Once in, the fence is very low, and is something to keep the predators out.

Brown reviewed the startup and maintenance costs of running a vineyard. He noted research from the Virginia Tech Website that indicated that, exclusive of land costs, it will cost about $11,000-$15,000 per acre to establish a vineyard.

He also fills out a time card "every single year," he said. "What is my time worth to me?"

As for equipment, purchase a tractor with enough horsepower. "You can never have too much horsepower to your PTO," said Brown.

Purchase a tractor with at least 50 horsepower that can turn easily. A pickup is important, besides herbicide sprayer, airblast sprayer, mower, fertilizer, flatbed trailer, and other items.

Using a work plan, growers can create an operating budget.

Brown exhibited a local grower's work plan budget, a typical example of costs for a 12.8-acre vineyard.

Brown said that, by following a business plan and keeping a careful eye on costs, will help grape growers "create discipline for the industry," he said.

"If you don't have a passion for it, you shouldn't be in it," Brown said.

For starters, "never clear woods to create vineyards. There's a reason the old-timers did not plow wooded lands."

Growers need to irrigate through drip lines. He explained the layout and equipment used on his vineyards.

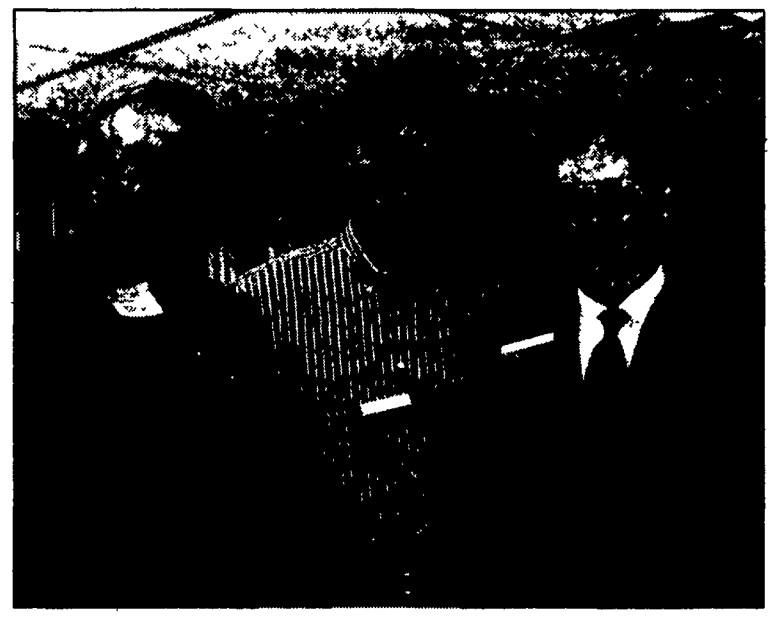
"to get the highest quality grapes, you have to pick them on the day they are ready."

And having different people with inconsistent pruning and other management methods can, Chien said, be a "recipe for disaster."

For those starting out, according to one grower, one person can take care of about 10-15 acres, full- time, if they are physically fit and don't get sick.

Pennsylvania Ag Secretary Samuel Hayes Jr. spoke about ways in which the state department of agriculture can help promote vineyards and winemaking.

Seventy-five percent of wine is sold at the vineyards in the state. The other 25 percent is for stores



At the SEGA meeting in Lancaster, speakers included, from left, Steven Brown, Indian Springs Vineyard; Mark Chien, wine grape agent; and Roland Freund, farm management agent.

For those starting, cash equity will be critical. There are many risk factors to consider, Brown noted.

For those who want to start with 10 acres, depending on land costs, it will cost about $100,000 and takes several years before a steady crop of juice is produced.

Roland Freund, Penn State farm management agent, spoke about the "Orchard Planner" Version" Beta financial management planner.

The planner runs on Excel software and can also run on MS Office workbook (the version with multiple pages).

Mark Chien, extension agent, spoke about care in label use rate and the importance of understanding your own vineyard climate, canopy management, and the circumstances specific to your orchard.

Also, disease pressure in areas like this can be a concern. "But don't let price dictate what your spray program is going to be," Chien said.

Some growers noted the year, though wet and full of some disease pressure, still turned out grapes of good quality. Though some reported a much lighter crop, quality stayed good.

Chien noted that the labor issue has to be resolved because, he said, and other marketing means.

There's simply not enough Pennsylvania wine produced for major statewide distribution, he noted.

The department recently awarded a $150,000 grant to study vine decline research during a three- year period, noted Chien of the extension office.

A grower panel examined issues facing growers. Included in the panel was Tim Couch, Allegro Vineyard, Brogue; Rick Masser, Benigna's Creek Vineyard, Pine Grove; Sid Butler, who operates a 12-13 acre vineyard in Nazareth; Jan Waltz, who operates a Manheim vineyard; Chris Jones, Eagles Crest vineyard, Chester Springs; and Dave Hoffman, president of SEGA, Landenburg.

Jones noted that his 13-acre site land costs ran to $37,000 per acre. He installed a 12-foot mesh deer fence at a cost of about $50,000.

Total cost for starting up: $422,000. He is attempting to market his grapes.

Couch, in the business 20 years, noted that after 20 years, posts start breaking and other items have to be replaced. It's important to construct a storage space, a pole barn or garage for equipment, to ensure it lasts.

Maryland DHIA Report For December

The December Dairy Herd Improvement information for dairy herds from the DHI processing center in Provo, Utah. The list includes herds from Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia. The information is listed by herd name, county association, number of cows in the herd and the average production per cow in the herd based on Energy Corrected Milk (ECM). ECM combines milk production and components.

The ECM formula is: (7.2 x lbs. protein) + (12.95 x lbs. fat) + (.327 x lbs. milk). To be included, the herd must have 10 cows averaging 65 pounds or more of ECM per cow, per day. All herds reported are on official DHI or DHIR test. Also listed are the top 10 herds in Maryland for the Brown Swiss, Guernseys, and Jerseys, and the top seven herds for Ayrshires.

ROASTED BEANS FOR PROFIT

Some of the many advantages of using Roasted Soybeans

* All natural protein with no harmful chemicals or fillers
* Very high bypass protein, unlike solvent soybean meal
* Increases ration palatabiity to heighten dry matter intake
* Includes a broad spectrum of the essential amino acids
* High protein and energy, yet low neutral detergent fiber. (NDF)

FOOTBALL Fiesta

Let's face it. Even though the finale of the football season is the perfect excuse to throw a party, it's the food that's often the best part of watching the big game.

Today's collection of recipes include those favorites sent in by readers and also some from Behold the Power of Cheese.

Remember, no matter whose team wins or loses — it's what you serve at halftime that guests will remember. So, fluff up the sofa cushions, stir up the chili, and get ready for kickoff!

CREAMY SALSA DIP

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
1 cup salsa, any variety

Mix together cream cheese and salsa until well blended. Refrigerate. Serve with crackers, tortilla chips or cut up vegetables.

Melinda Wolfe
Pa. Dairy Princess

ENCHILADA DIP

2 1-pound cans diced tomatoes, drained
2 4-ounce cans green chilies, chopped, drained
½ pound Velveeta cheese, cubed
½ pound cheddar cheese, cubed
1 tablespoon chili powder
½ teaspoon garlic salt

Spread cheese in bottom of casserole. Place chilies on top. Stir seasoning into tomatoes and pour over chilies. Do not stir.

Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Stir and serve with tortilla chips.

Debbie Reynolds
Wrightsville

SPICY CHICKEN WINGS

In a saucepan, combine:
½ cup corn syrup
½ cup ketchup
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup Worcestershire sauce
¼ cup Dijon mustard
1 small chopped onion
1 tablespoon minced garlic
1 tablespoon chili powder

Bring mixture to a boil, reduce heat and simmer uncovered 15 minutes. Meanwhile, cut 16 chicken wings into three sections. Save tips for soup stock. Place remaining sections in a well-greased 15x10x1-inch baking pan. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 minutes, turning once, basting once. Bake 15 minutes longer, turn, baste, and bake 10-15 minutes more. Serve with additional sauce.

Katherine Wagner
Mount Joy

SUPERBOWL SANDWICH

Mix together:
1 pound chipped ham
½ cup chili sauce
4 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup Velveeta cheese, cut into small pieces
1 small onion, chopped fine

Fill eight hot dog buns. Wrap in foil and heat in 350 degree oven 20 minutes.

Katherine Wagner
Mount Joy

SAUSAGE BALLS IN APPLEBUTTER

1 large jar applebutter
1 pound loose sausage

Make marble-size balls with sausage. Saute in skillet until cooked. Drain. Pour apple butter over balls and heat. Keep warm in chafing dish to serve.

Katherine Wagner
Mount Joy

CRAB DIP

7-ounce can crab meat
8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
Dash Worcestershire sauce
Paprika

Mix cream cheese and Worcestershire sauce in bowl. Stir in crab meat and onions. Spread into lightly greased pie dish. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake 15 minutes at 350 degrees. Serve with crackers.

Jill Hoover
Lancaster Co.
Alternate Dairy Princess

GREEN OLIVE CAESAR DIP

5-ounces parmesan shredded cheese, divided
¼ cup cilantro, chopped, reserve small amount for garnish
2 cups mayonnaise
1 cup pitted green salad olives with pimento
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon black pepper
½ teaspoon sugar

Place 4 ounces cheese and remaining ingredients in a food processor or blender. Process with 4 to 6 on/off pulses — just enough to mix everything together and coarsely chop olives.

Spoon into a serving bowl and top with reserved cheese and cilantro.

Serve with tortilla chips and a fresh vegetable tray of cut jicama, cucumbers, radishes, inner leaves of romaine lettuce, and red bell pepper slices.

Unlock the secrets of casual entertaining! Whether you're planning a weekend brunch, weeknight dinner or an outdoor BBQ—the taste-tempting recipes featured in our new booklet will help you whip up quick and easy meals for any occasion.

SPICY BLACK BEAN AND SAUSAGE CHILI

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 large onion, chopped
1 medium green bell pepper, seeded, diced
1 pound cooked sausage, thinly sliced
16-ounce jar salsa
2 cans (15-ounces each) black beans, drained
2 (14-ounce) cans diced tomatoes, undrained
½ teaspoon crumbled oregano
8-ounces shredded cheese
Optional toppings: chopped fresh cilantro, green onions, sour cream, crumbled corn tortilla chips

Pour oil into large deep pan and warm over medium heat. Add onion and cook until slightly tender and translucent, about 3-4 minutes. Stir in green pepper cook one minute. Stir in sausage, salsa, beans, tomatoes, and oregano.

Simmer over medium-low heat, stirring often for about 30 minutes. Serve in warm bowls.

SAUSAGE CHEESE BALLS

3 cups Bisquick
1 pound uncooked bulk pork sausage
4 cups shredded cheddar cheese
½ cup grated parmesan cheese
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon dried rosemary leaves
½ teaspoon parsley flakes

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Grease jelly roll pan. Stir together ingredients. Shape mixture into 1-inch balls. Place in pan.

Bake 20-25 minutes or until brown. Immediately remove from pan. Serve warm with sauce for dipping. About 7½ dozen appetizers.

Marsha Curry

STRING CHEESE STICKS WITH DIPPING SAUCE

2¼ cups Bisquick
⅔ cup milk
8-ounce package string cheese
¼ cup butter, melted
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
1 can pizza sauce, heated

Heat oven to 450 degrees. Line cookie sheet with aluminum foil. Stir Bisquick and milk until soft dough forms, beat 30 seconds. Turn dough onto surface generously dusted with Bisquick; gently roll in Bisquick to coat. Shape into ball; knead 10 times.

Roll or pat dough into 12x8-inch rectangle. Cut into eight 6x2-inch rectangles. Roll each rectangle around one piece of cheese. Pinch edge into roll to seal; seal ends. Roll on surface to completely enclose cheese sticks.

Pennsylvanians Carve Up Cheese Creations At Farm Show

PHILADELPHIA — Hundreds of spectators looked on as blocks of cheddar cheese became works of art during the third annual cheese carving contest Jan. 7, at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg.

Winning first prize was Angela Hausch of Morgantown, who created a jack-in-the-box from her block of cheese. Hausch was one of six contestants to compete in the contest, which is sponsored by the American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic, the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program.

Hausch and the other contestants were chosen after submitting their cheese carving sketches in December to the dairy promotion organizations sponsoring the contest. The day of the event, they each were given a five-pound block of cheddar cheese donated by Mahoning Cheese of Smicksburg, carving tools, and one hour to carve their own cheese creations.

A panel of local celebrity judges selected the top three winners, who were awarded gourmet cheese baskets and $150, $100, and $50, respectively, Lori Burkholder, host of WGAL-TV's "12:30 Live," Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Melinda Wolfe, and Virginia Dairy Princess Laura Robinson chose the winning entries based on creativity and visual appearance.

Earning second-place honors for her depiction of a cow jumping over the moon was Karen Huston of Dover. Wendy Gregory, a last minute entry from Shermansdale, took third place with her carving of a cat. Other finalists — Rodney Flinchbaugh of Dover, Ken Howard of Middletown, and Mike Widrick of Mount Bethel — all received one-pound blocks of cheddar cheese for their participation.

The Cheese Carving Contest is a fun way to promote the versatility of cheese, according to Deanna Rose, communications specialist with the American Dairy Association/Dairy Council Middle Atlantic and contest coordinator. "This is the third year that we have held this unique contest," Rose said. "This year's carvings were very creative, and the crowds that watch are getting larger and larger each time we hold this event."

At the end of the contest, all six cheese carving creations were placed on display in the Food Court. They were added to another dairy farmer-sponsored exhibit. "A Tribute to Pennsylvania Cheesemakers," a new feature at this year's Farm Show.

'You've Won! What To Do With A Windfall'

RUTGERS, N.J. — Windfall recipients generally fall into two categories: 1) those that are so overwhelmed by receiving the money that they do nothing because they are paralyzed either with fear of investing it badly and losing it, or guilt because they didn't earn it, and 2) those who are blinded by the sudden wealth and start spending it like there's no tomorrow on expensive "toys" like a Porsche, boat, or upscale home.

What should you do if you find yourself newly rich? If you feel compelled to go on a shopping spree, then make it a mini spree. Allow yourself no more than five percent of the windfall to get it out of your system.

Pay off any high interest credit card or other consumer debt that offers no tax benefits.

Put the money in a short-term CD or Treasury Bill to get it out of your reach and the reach of others who will come out of the woodwork to either borrow, ask for outright gifts, or offer their "help" to deploy your money. Let them know the money is tied up.

Start interviewing and hire a Certified Financial Planner or other trusted advisor. Consider a fee-only planner (one who is not compensated by commissions on products but is paid for advice). Interview at least three planners before settling on one. This person will in all likelihood consult with and link you to a competent estate planner and accountant. (All of a sudden, estate planning will become very important, particularly to preserve the $675,000 federal estate tax exemption that can be accomplished by establishing a credit shelter trust). Set aside federal and state taxes that will be due, both on the windfall itself and investment earnings.

If the windfall becomes a reality as a result of stock options, check out the tax ramifications before exercising them.

Before investing the money, review and/or set your financial goals such as retirement and children's college education.

What not to do if you receive a windfall: Don't quit your job yet. Think it through carefully and over time. If you are receiving a major sum, perhaps, work part-time until you have figured out what you want to do with the rest of your life.

Don't blow it on luxury items.

Do You Suffer From Fibromyalgia?

When I was introduced to New Image I was 50 pounds over weight and suffered from fibromyalgia I was so depressed and in pain the majority of the time I was taking steroids and four other medications, one of which made me so 'groggy' I could hardly get out of bed and another gave me ulcers I began taking New Image secretly because I thought my family would make fun of me After a month, I discovered I had lost eight pounds and seven inches Wow! Then it dawned on me, I was feeling better, the depression and pain were gone In two months I was off all medications "I feel SUPERIFIC!" Now, two years later I have lost 43 pounds and 30 inches Thank you New Image for giving me a new life again Judy Swift - Mt Washington, KY

"Because we're here."

Three-year-old Caleb, our middle grandchild (at the moment) never walks into our house. He bursts into the house. Or sneaks into the house to "surprise" us. Or explodes through the front or back door, demanding "Where's grandpa?"

On that particular day in early January, he had arrived with his mother, brother, and sister, trotted to the Christmas tree which was then still intact in the living room, and plugged in the lights to illuminate our six-foot, potted pine.

"Because we're here," he matter-of-factly explained, of his reasoning that the tree needed to be lit at that particular noontime moment on a bright, sunshiny day.

What better reason could a grandpa and grandma need to do and say things they would never think to do otherwise, than having a trio of loving, lively grandkids in and out of the house?

"Because we're here."

Because they're here, our deck is usually decked-out with child-sized riding tractors, tricycles, and cars, which are dragged out from the back porch parking lot at every opportunity. I put them away. They get them out. I put them away. They get them out. I put them away, they get them...etc., etc. Occasionally, they even ride them a few minutes.

Because they're here, I've learned to zip the computer system in "hide" mode when I hear them coming: hit "save," hit the monitor's "off" button and prop something in front of the lit buttons of the power surge unit. With no visible motion on the screen and no buttons shining with red lights, busy toddler fingers aren't as likely to poke the unit's master switch and shut down whatever project I'm working on.

Because they're here, we recently spent a two-day, snowy getaway at the hunting cabin serving as Indoor Entertainment Central. My skills in building structures from playing cards and cutting paper chains of objects ranging from cats to Valentine hearts to jack-o-lanterns have been sharpened.

Because they're here, we've discovered an enhanced interest in finding fast food restaurants with expansive and interesting indoor playgrounds, great for just hanging around in with a hot beverage while the kids run off excess energy. Be aware: you may end up in the middle of some one else's gleeful and exuberant birthday party group.

Because they're here, our garden sports fewer beans and squash and more "fun stuff, like patches of Indian corn and decorative gourds and pumpkins ranging in size from the tiny babies to those super-duper-huge varieties.

Because they're here, all our farm magazines are in shreds due to clipping tractor and machinery pictures for our own, original "tractor scrapbooks."

Because they're here, my cart of groceries at checkout includes products like packaged puddings and yogurt with "sprinkles" and juice boxes and freezer pops and lots and lots of extra grapes when we find them on sale.

Because they're here, it seems perfectly logical to stand at the kitchen counter cutting sheets of plastic wrap into small squares to wrap three or four small "gummy" Lifesaver candies in little packs because I can't find prepackaged ones. (Sugary candy is limited here and a few small "gummies" are just the right amount for the occasional and necessary treats.)

Because they're here, The Farmer has become familiar with the toy machinery sections of every farm equipment dealership he frequents for repair parts. Even some he doesn't frequent too frequently.

Because they're here, the refrigerator magnets have become dishwasher magnets. And are usually upside down.

Because they're here, we have impromptu family pizza parties, deer-spotting drives, snow sledding, leaf jumping, book-reading, and ride-the-bikes-around-the-cow-barn sessions.

Because they're here; life has a whole new dimension, stretching our imaginations, our dreams, our hopes. To say nothing of our aging muscles sometimes.

Because they're here.

What better excuse could there possibly be to act like a kid again?

Folic Acid For Health

(NAPS) — There's encouraging news for women, who are planning to have children: Taking the B-vitamin folic acid every day can help reduce the risk of having a child with spina bifida or other neural tube defects (NTDs).

Spina bifida involves incomplete formation of the spine and is the most common NTD, a group of serious birth defects of the brain and spinal cord. It may lead to paralysis of the legs, loss of bowel and bladder control, water on the brain and learning disabilities. One out of every 1,000 newborns in the United States has spina bifida; fortunately, many go on to lead successful and productive lives.

NTDs like spina bifida occur during the first month of pregnancy — before most women know they are pregnant. In addition, such birth defects can happen in any family. Most babies with spina bifida are born to parents with no family history of the condition.

Folic acid helps build healthy cells, so it is important for all women who could become pregnant to take it every day. While folic acid cannot guarantee having a healthy baby, it can help. Studies have shown that if women of childbearing age were to take folic acid every day, their chances of having a child with an NTD may be reduced by 75 percent.

Folic acid has also been shown to have other benefits for both men and women, such as fighting heart disease and certain cancers. Folic acid is available in many multivitamins and by eating such foods as dark green, leafy vegetables; oranges; and fortified breads and cereals.

For most women, it is enough to take 400 micrograms of folic acid. Other women who have a history of NTDs need to take ten times as much, for one to three months before pregnancy and for the first few months of pregnancy. This amount (4000 mcg) is available by prescription. It is important for women to speak with a doctor and plan their pregnancies to be sure they are getting the right amount of folic acid.

For women not thinking about becoming pregnant, it is still important to take a vitamin supplement with folic acid every day, as half of all pregnancies are not planned. If you are a woman thinking about becoming pregnant, speak with your doctor about your personal risk of having an NTD-affected pregnancy.

For more information, call the Spina Bifida Association of America at 1-800-621-3141, e-mail sbaa@sbaa.org or visit the Web site at www.sbaa.org.

York County 4-H Offers Equine Swap

YORK (York Co.) — The Equine Swap will offer opportunities to "Swap" tack and educational information on Feb. 10 at the York County 4-H Center from 10:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Sensational Soups

I can't think of a better way to chase away the chill of winter than a hot, savory bowl of soup. Season to season, simple to elegant, hearty or light, soup can fill the bill for a nourishing meal.

Most soups start with broth or stock. It's easy to prepare your own chicken, beef, fish or vegetable stock. Bring out the flavors by adding carrots, onions, celery and herbs in stages. Extract flavors from basic ingredients without adding extra salt. Freeze stock to use later.

On busy days you can use your own frozen homemade stock or use purchased broth (now available in lower sodium and reduced fat) Bouillon cubes or granules and water also make a quick broth. These are also available in lower sodium. Add a few vegetables plus cooked, chopped meat and in 15-30 minutes a quick lunch or supper will be ready.

Leftovers can be frozen in single serving containers. To take along for lunch, pack into an insulated lunch bag as a cold source to keep the rest of your food cold, and then heat the soup in the microwave for lunch. For home use, freeze in one-cup portions in plastic reclosable bags.

Cool large amounts of soup quickly by placing the stockpot in an ice water bath or by dividing among several low, flat containers and place in the refrigerator immediately. Never cool foods at room temperature. Refrigerate if you plan to use the soup within three days, otherwise freeze extras.

A few thoughts to keep in mind when freezing soups: Leave at lease one and one half inches of headspace in the container.

If possible, wait to thicken soup during reheating.

Soups with beans, vegetables and meat retain flavor well when reheating.

Thaw soups in the refrigerator or microwave.

Use frozen soups within four months.

Reheat slowly to at least 165 F.

Serve your favorite soups in a mug, bowl or crock. For a change, serve your next chowder, bisque or thick cream soup in a bread bowl. Accent the color, flavor, and texture of the soup with a garnish. Besides the old favorites like croutons and crackers, try popcorn, pretzels, chopped nuts, julienne vegetables, grated cheese, sour cream, grated nutmeg or paprika, or crumbled bacon.

My husband, Bob, always liked his mother's homemade potato soup. We have taken it a step further and enjoy baked potato soup on cold winter days. Bob likes it thick with chunks of baked potato and bits of potato skins.

Bob's Baked Potato Soup

2 large baking potatoes
4 tablespoons butter
2 green onions, chopped
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken stock (see recipe below)
2 cups milk
½ cup sour cream
4 slices bacon, crumbled
3 ounces cheddar cheese, grated
Additional milk salt and pepper paprika

Heat oven to 425 F. Wash and scrub potatoes. Bake until fork tender. Split the potatoes in half, scoop out the meat. Mash about half the potato with a fork, chop the rest, set aside. Chop the skins. Melt butter in a medium saucepan, saute onions over medium heat, blend in flour. With a wire whisk, add chicken stock. Blend in milk. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until it begins to thicken. While the milk mixture is hot, whisk in the potatoes and skins. Add sour cream and most of the crumbled bacon. Season with salt and pepper. Heat thoroughly, but do not allow to boil. Add the cheese a little at a time until it is all blended in. Thin with a little additional milk if desired. Serve in a bread bowl, garnish with paprika and remaining crumbled bacon.

Chicken Stock

2 pounds chicken backs, necks and/or wings
8 cups water
2 small onions, quartered
3 ribs celery with leaves, cut into 3" pieces
2 carrots, scrubbed, cut into 3" pieces
Bouquet garni:
½ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
½ teaspoon marjoram
2 teaspoons fresh parsley
6-8 peppercorns
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup dry white wine (optional)

In a Dutch oven, combine chicken and water. Bring to boil. Skim off any residue that rises to the top. Reduce heat and simmer for 30 minutes. Prepare bouquet garni by tying herbs in a cheesecloth bag. Add remaining ingredients, simmer partially covered 2-3 hours or until meat comes off bones easily. Remove bones, strain broth. Pick meat and refrigerate or freeze for later use. If a more concentrated stock is desired, simmer stock uncovered until it is reduced as desired. Pour into a low flat container. Cool uncovered in refrigerator. Skim off fat. Cover and store up to 3 days or freeze up to 6 months.

Rally To Focus On Faith Links

HINKLETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Farmers and consumers interested in supporting local farming through direct-to-consumer marketing will meet 2 to 9 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 17, at the New Covenant Mennonite Fellowship near Hinkletown.

Titled "Local Food, Local Farming with Faith: Building connections and convictions, face to face," the event will feature special guest John Pitney, Eugene, Ore., a Methodist folksinger, pastor, and agricultural prophet.

Opening the day will be a "sustainable agriculture farms and product showcase" for local farmers to display their products and marketing approaches.

Focus is on equipping family farms to successfully produce and sell wholesome food directly to families, groups and regional markets. On hand will be producers of pastured poultry, organic vegetables and flowers, beef and lamb, and organic milk; regional processors of local crops; supply and equipment marketers; and Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) membership opportunities.

Later, three farmers will share how they combine faith, farming methods and family life to build their communities. Speaking will be Roman Stoltzfoos, Kinzer, organic dairy farmer and sustainable farming advocate, on the importance of creating a family farm mission statement; Peggy and David Fogarty-Harnish, Ephrata, fresh produce growers, on Community Supported Agriculture (CSA); and Forrest Stricker, Wernersville (Berks Co.), pasture-based dairyman, on the cycle of grace involving our sacrificial giving and God's bounty.

Evening buffet (preregistration required) features locally produced foods. Rev. Pitney and musical friends will present a collection of stories and songs.

For details and to register for the meals ($9 per person, deadline to register Feb. 8), contact: Greg Bowman, P.O. Box 490, Bally, PA 19503, (610) 845-2436.

Pennsylvania Honey Queen Buzzes Into National Limelight

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

JONESTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — If some people believe that a pretty face is the only deciding factor for who walks away with the crown in commodity pageants, Renee Blatt sets the record straight.

After an intense three days of judging, the Pennsylvania representative gained the judges' nod for her "technical and scientific knowledge and for her marketing skills."

People familiar with Renee as the state honey queen know that she is an encyclopedia of facts and figures on the importance of the bee industry. Her knowledge caused her to stand out when queens from seven states competed for the national title at the American Beekeeping Federation Convention in San Diego, Calif., Jan. 11-15.

For several days, the contestants were under the judges' surveillance. The uncanny part was that for most of the time the contestants did not who the judges were among the 400 guests in attendance. So if she was questioned by a guest mingling with the crowd, the contestant never knew if she was being "judged" for her answer.

Contestants did know they were being judged for prepared skits — and this was almost Renee's undoing. Much to her despair, she discovered a few hours before the skit competition that she had left her carefully prepared script at home. She had put a lot of effort and forethought into developing a humorous yet fact-filled skit in which people from the audience would be asked to participate. Renee had typed instructions and script for each of the participating guests.

After midnight, Renee was trying to recompose the script but it wasn't coming together. Exhausted from being awake 23 hours without sleep, Renee, in tears, called her dad who had remained at home to take care of the dairy farm. He consoled her and found the missing script, which he faxed to the California hotel.

Renee's skit was a big success and brought lots of laughter with the comical input of the impromptu guests, one who suffered arthritis, another burns, and another allergies, as each discovered the role bees play in treatment of these ailments.

On another day, the contestants held a Bee Expo for a local crowd. Renee was in charge of a honey-tasting booth and was delighted to sample the flavors of honey from Alaska, Bermuda, and California. Each sample had a distinct flavor. Bermuda honey tasted like a pepper honey, and the California variety tasted like sage and orange.

Other activities included a quiz bowl formatted similar to the popular television show, "Who Wants to be a Millionaire." If needed, each contestant had access to a lifeline and to the audience casting votes. The questions were related to bee pollination, honey, and agricultural issues.

Contestants also had to a chance to display their ad lib ability and marketing skills by introducing items to be auctioned to raise money for the organization. Renee was the only contestant who received a ribbon in the baking contest held at the convention.

But the biggest scores were garnered from contestants prepared speeches and their answers to impromptu questions.

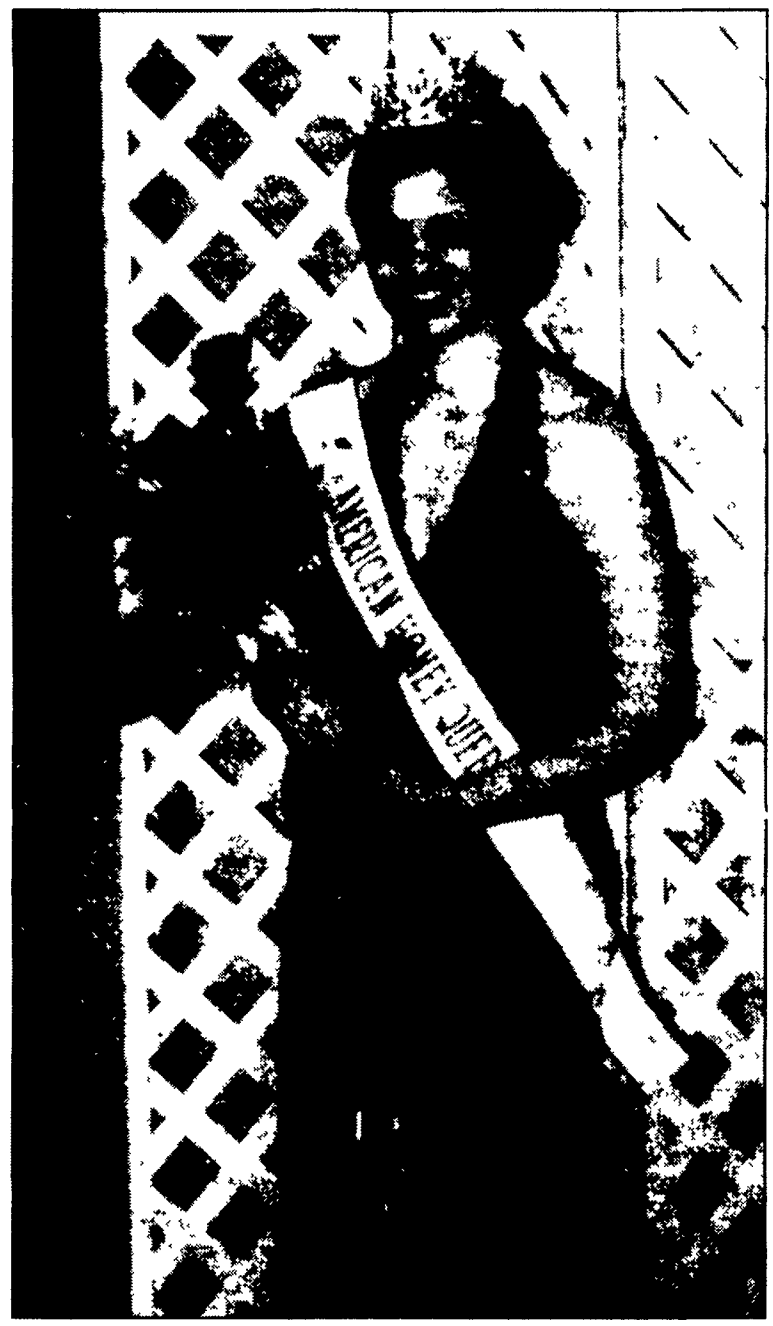
Competition was stiff and a judges' stalemate required each contestant to again appear before the panel of judges for a final question. One of the judges said that as a member of an ag appropriations committee, she would like to know why she should care about the bee industry.

Renee spoke of the need for funding research, of the mites and diseases attacking bees colonies, and the importance of bees that are responsible for one-third of the world's food supply.

She explained the impact the industry faces from the threat of pesticides that kill bees and the need for anti-dumping laws protect the U.S. supply of honey from countries such as China and Argentina that are neither regulated in honey production nor in labor laws, which keeps the U.S. from being able to compete financially.

Renee spoke of the need for bee keepers and honey bees to be protected since bees are the first link in the food supply of fruits, vegetables, and even beef and dairy foods because bees provide clover and forage pollination. Flowers, too, are reliant upon bee pollination.

"Through pollination, bees contribute $14.6 billion annually to food production," Renee said.



Renee Blatt exchanges her Pennsylvania tiara for that of the American Honey Queen. A $2000 scholarship and payment for appearances is sweet success for Blatt, who excels in promoting the industry she loves.

> "I'd really like to speak to state and local legislators and lobby for our cause. My ultimate goal is to lobby in Washington and speak to President Bush — after all, I voted for him, so he should hear my input."
> American Honey Queen Renee Blatt

After Renee's discourse, she was told the judges' decision was unanimous. "That's the one," they agreed.

"All the contestants were really knowlegeable," Renee said. "But facts and figures have always fascinated me, and the question gave me the chance to expand on it."

As the American Honey Queen, Renee receives a $2,000 scholarship and is reimbursed for promotions.

"I'd really like to speak to state and local legislators and lobby for our cause," Renee said of the bee industry. "My ultimate goal is to lobby in Washington and speak to President Bush — after all I voted for him, he should hear my input," she joked.

Renee also hopes to present the bee keeper's perspective on television shows. She especially would like to appear on her favorite show, "The View."

This week, Renee also began an internship with the Department of Agriculture Bureau of Marketing Development. The internship is a requirement for her graduation from Central Penn College, where she studied entrepreneurial and small business and marketing. Renee said the Department is willing to work with her schedule that will sometimes require her to travel weeks at a time.

Renee is the daughter of Steve and Jennifer Blatt and works on the family's dairy and hog farm in Jonestown, Lebanon County. Renee's involvement with the honey bee industry is especially interesting because she of her own accord purchased bee hives in response to her fascination with bees.

She sought information on beekeeping and after trial and error discovered the Pennsylvania Beekeepers Association. The organization's help provided the missing link to raising a healthy bee colony.

Renee encourages young women to become involved by representing their area as honey queen. Since she is busy representing the nation, a state honey queen is desperately needed. For more information and for recipes using honey, contact Linda Hackenburg, R.# 3, Box 349, Lewisburg, PA 17837.

"It's an incredible opportunity to represent the bee industry," Renee said. "Bee keepers have a lot of knowledge, but often aren't interviewed by the media who are more inclined to talk with someone wearing a tiara. A queen attracts attention and is an effective way to teach people that bees are not just stinging insects but an intricate part of the food chain and vital to the survival of mankind," she said.

Traditional Craft Classes At Landis Valley Museum

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Adults interested in traditional arts and crafts are invited to attend Landis Valley Museum's Winter Institute programs, Feb. 16-19. These crafts, reminiscent of an earlier time, are unique and especially satisfying to create and add to your home decor.

Weekend and one-day classes for the beginner include redware whistle making, rug hooking, scherenschnitte, tinsmithing, and woodworking. All classes are taught by area craftspeople, several of whom have been recognized by Early American Homes magazine as leaders in their respective fields. These include Sharon Schaich, Linda Kerlin and Bob Hughes. Clair Garman is a third-generation cabinet maker and has taught at LVM for 18 years, and Beth Feaser has apprenticed with a master tinsmith. Tom Martin is a staff member and popular speaker and demonstrator of historic foodways. His advanced class in open hearth cooking is open only to those who have taken the beginner's class.

For a brochure or information, call (717) 569-0401 or (717) 581-0591.

Landis Valley Museum is located 2.5 miles north of Lancaster, on Route 272, the Oregon Pike, a marked exit off both Routes 30 and 322.

Winter Moods

Winter weather can make you sad? Studies show that sunlight affects your mood?

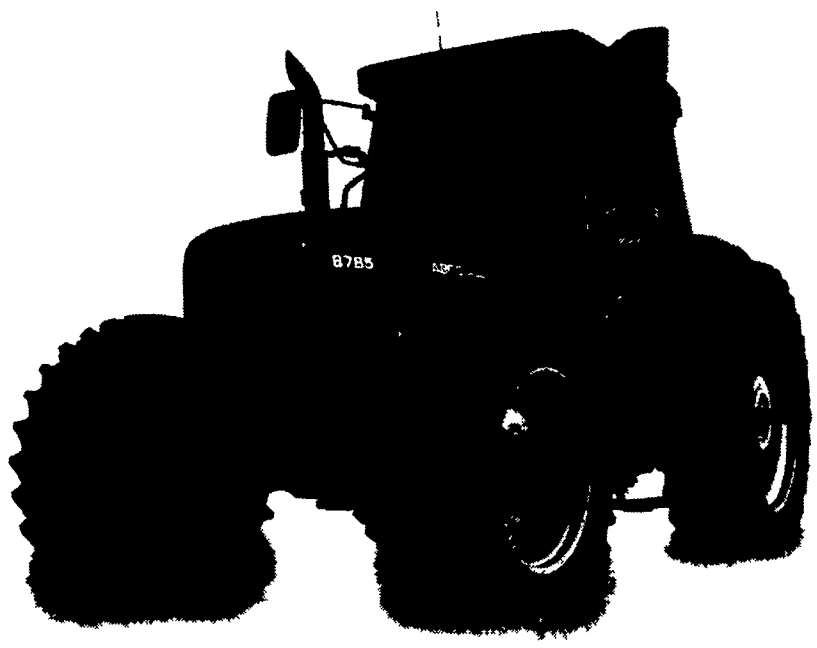
That's right-during summer months when there are more daylight hours, people experience greater amounts of energy! During the winter when sunlight isn't as plentiful, we can get a disease called SAD-Seasonal Affective Disorder.

SAD can affect between six and 14 percent of the population in areas of the world with cold, gloomy winter weather. People with SAD may be cranky and have a tendency to overeat (they crave carbohydrates). These people may also sleep a great deal, and they don't like to participate in social activities with their friends.

Scientists know that exposure to daylight helps the human body process food better and encourages production of vitamin D3-important for using calcium and phosphorus efficiently. Sunlight can also affect our eyes! Sunlight stimulates serotonin production which helps regulate blood vessel constriction and a hormone called melatonin. If we have too much melatonin in our bodies, we get sleepy and feel tired all of the time.

Although SAD isn't usually a serious disease, you may want to avoid feeling "blue" during the winter months. Try to spend more time outside and expose yourself to morning light.

"But Wait... There's More."



Why quote a TV infomercial pitchman? Because at your AGCO Allis dealership, we really are offering even more features on our AGCO Allis 8700 Series tractors.

You will still get AGCO's best-in-the-business 4-year/4,000-hour warranty that provides engine and powertrain coverage for up to four years.

ANSWER — Lorraine Nash, Mainesburg, requested a recipe to make gummies that taste like gummie bears. Thanks to J.N.D. for e-mailing the following recipe.

Gummi Bears

1 small box Jell-O with sugar (any flavor)
7 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup water

Mix in a saucepan until mixture resembles play dough. Place pan over low heat and stir until melted. When completely melted, pour into plastic candy molds, and place in the freezer for 5 minutes.

ANSWER — For Faye Milwid, Delta, here is one from an anonymous reader.

Double Your Pleasure
Pumpkin Orange Chiffon Pie

1 package orange Jell-O
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon mace
¼ cup sugar
1½ cups evaporated milk
1 cup boiling water
1 package instant vanilla pudding
1½ cups pumpkin puree
½ cup cold water
2 9-inch pie shells

Add boiling water to jelly powder, salt, mace, and sugar in a medium-sized bowl and stir thoroughly until dissolved. Add cold water. Chill until slightly thickened, about 30 minutes.

Meanwhile, pour milk over pudding mix and beat with mixer until well blended, about one minute. Let stand in refrigerator until set.

When jelly has thickened sufficiently, set bowl in a large bowl of ice cubes and water. Beat with an electric beater until thick and frothy, about 2 minutes.

Blend in instant pudding mix and pumpkin at lowest speed of mixer.

Pour filling into two pie shells and chill until firm. May be garnished with whipped cream and maraschino cherries. Makes two pies. Serves 12-16.

ANSWER — Here is the recipe requested for canning winter squash.

To Can Pumpkin Or Winter Squash

mWash; remove seeds. Peel and cut up. Steam until tender. Put through food mill. Heat through; stir to prevent sticking.

Pack hot, leaving ½-inch headspace. Add no salt or liquid. Adjust lids.

Process in a pressure canner at 10 pounds, pints for 65 minutes, quarts for 80 minutes.

Pickled Eggs

Cook 5 minutes:
1¼ cups white vinegar
¾ cup water
3 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon garlic salt
5 peppercorns
1 whole clove
Few dill seeds
Piece of ginger root

Pour over hard-boiled eggs that are put into a 2-quart jar. Pour cool juice over eggs. Cover, refrigerate overnight to develope flavor. Eggs can be stored two weeks.

ANSWER — Linda Smith, Walpole, N.H., requested the recipe for the starter to make fruitcake in which the fruit ferments in the jar. She has the fruit part of the recipe but not the starter. Rhoda Mast writes that she has the starter to share but doesn't know how to get it to N.H. Any ideas, write to her at 238 Twin County Rd., Morgantown, PA 19543.

ANSWER — Thanks to Blair County Dairy Princess Diana Bigelow for sending these recipes.

Strawberry Cheesecake Squares

8-ounces cream cheese
1½ cups creamed cottage cheese
2 eggs
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups fine graham cracker crumbs
⅓ cup sugar
⅓ cup melted butter

Mix crumbs, sugar, and butter until well blended. Press into bottom of 8-inch square cake pan. Soften cheese at room temperature. Press cottage cheese through sieve, whip until smooth. Blend with cream cheese. Add eggs, sugar, and vanilla. Pour into crumb-lined pan. Bake in 350-degree oven about 30 minutes, or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Cool, spread with strawberries and glaze.

Potatoes Supreme

5 cups cooked, diced potatoes
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 cups cottage cheese
2 teaspoons salt
1-2 tablespoons grated onion
1 small clove garlic, minced
½ cup shredded American cheese
Dash paprika

Combine sour cream, cottage cheese, salt, onion, and garlic. Gently fold in diced potatoes; pour into buttered 1½ quart casserole. Top with shredded cheese and sprinkle lightly with paprika. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 40-45 minutes or until thoroughly heated and lightly browned on top. Makes 6 servings.

Is Lead Bad For Health?

Lead can be very dangerous-especially to kids!

Young children have a craving for unnatural food, called pica. When a baby or young child crawls around on the floor, they may eat tiny pieces of peeling or chipping lead-based paint. They may also ingest dust and soil contaminated with lead from paint that flakes. If the dust in your house is contaminated from old, lead-based paint then you, your siblings and parents could get lead poisoning.

Lead-based paint isn't used anymore, but older homes and buildings may still have lead paints on the walls. Although the best thing to do is remove this paint, there are other steps you can take to keep yourself and your family healthy.

- Always wash hands before meals, snacks, nap time and bed time.
- Stay away from chipping and peeling paint.
- Keep play areas as dust-free as possible.
- Don't allow children to chew or suck on painted surfaces like window sills, cribs or old painted toys.

If you live in a house built before the 1950s, it may contain lead-based paint. Yo may want to test old paint for lead. To receive a list of certified laboratories, call the National Lead Information Center Clearinghouse at 1-800-424-LEAD.

Lancaster Society 20

Thursday, Jan. 4, Farm Women #20 met at the home of Barbara Stone with Marie Foose as co-hostess. After the refreshments, Marie had the devotions, reading from the Book of Luke for the Scripture and followed up with a corresponding reading. The Lord's Prayer was prayed in unison followed by the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

The president, Nancy Lefever, presided at the business meeting. The 14 members present answered to the Roll Call by stating what their New Year's resolutions were. Five members will be attending the State Convention.

For the program, Judy Smith of the Arthritis Foundation gave a very interesting talk divulging many different illnesses that are in the arthritis family. There are more than 100 different types of arthritis and what causes most types is unknown. Some of the common types include gout; lyme disease, osteoporosis; rheumatoid arthritis, and scleroderma. Each type has different symptoms and treatments. Your doctor can identify the type based on symptoms and a physical exam. Call the Arthritis Foundation, Lancaster-Lebanon Counties Branch, 630 Janet Avenue, Lancaster for more information. Judy handed out different sheets on the subject.

The meeting closed by singing "Brighten The Corner" to meet in February at the home of Vera Herr with Jean Ressel co-hosting.

Berks County Society 6

On Nov. 21, Lancaster Farm Women Group 6 met at the home of Dorothy Wagner. Speaker was Patti Richwein of the Salvation Army Boyertown, who spoke about organizing youth activities after school, video games, computers and providing an area for day care at the farmer bowling alley on South Reading Avenue and Boyertown.

President Naomi Mest opened the meeting. Scripture was from Proverbs 16, followed by prayer and the flag salute. The roll call question was "How do you like this cold weather?" Seven members answered.

A get well card was sent to Roger Wagner and Jane Kramer of group #8. A thank you note was received from the family of Cindy Fink, who was corresponding secretary and who passed away in October.

Karen Hoffman was appointed to begin plans to observe the anniversary of the group formed in January, 35 years ago.

Pearl Hoffman and Barbara Kelchner were elected to audit the books. Elizabeth Pieffer was accepted as a new member. The next meeting will be at Wegmans Restaurant. The Christmas party took place Dec. 9 at Wegmans Restaurant. The meal consisted of ham and turkey with all the trimmings.

Prayer was offered by Barbara Kelchner. The meal was attended by 19 people. After the meal, entertainment for the evening was by Sammy Miller and Shirley Miller. Barbara played the violin assisted by Sammy. Christmas songs and country songs were sung and each person had a chance to sing into the microphone.

Plans were made to visit Ruth Herbein, a resident at Manor Care, Laureldale. Plans were also made for the state convention at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel in Camp Hill. The next meeting will be at the home of Barbara Kelchner.

Berks Society 1

Eleven members answered to roll call at the afternoon January meeting of the Berks County Society of Farm Women Group #1 at the home of Pauline Hartman in Oley.

President Ruth Walters asked for reports from the various committees and proceeded to inform the group of the Farm City Council and the activities the group participated in over the holidays at Berks Heim. She also shared the Farm Show happenings and updated the group on planned activities at the Heim for the upcoming year.

The program for the month consisted of the reading of the county by-laws and a review of the list of "things to remember" presented to our president by the county board at their bi-monthly meeting.

Each member had been asked to bring a favorite poem along to the meeting, and they were read at this time — followed by much discussion.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and members stayed on to enjoy the fellowship of each other.

The next meeting is a scheduled luncheon meeting to be held Feb. 14 at the Pleasantville Diner beginning at 1 p.m.

Travel To Tanzania

Located in eastern Africa, the United Republic of Tanzania is bordered by Kenya, Mozambique and the Indian Ocean. The largest of the East African nations, Tanzania is more than twice the size of California.

The islands of Zanzibar, Mafia and Pemba are part of the nation. Its capital is Dar es Salaam, where more than 750,000 people live. More than 31 million people, known as Tanzanians, live in this nation. The majority of them—about 99 percent—are native Africans from more than 100 tribes. The rest of them are Asian, European and Arabic.

Although English is used in business and government, and taught in higher education, Swahili is taught in schools and spoken by most of the people. In addition, there are many local languages spoken.

Tanzania is one of the poorest countries in the world. The nation is very dependent on farming, which employs 90 percent of the working people. Most of the country's exports—85 percent—are from farming and include coffee, cotton, cashews and tobacco.

THE GREAT ESCAPIST

There are many stories surrounding the life of Houdini...some true, some not. For instance, although the world knew him as Harry Houdini, his real name was Ehrich Weiss.

Houdini always said he was born in April 1874 in Appleton, Wisconsin. However, he was really born in March 1874 in Budapest, Hungary. When he was very young, Houdini's family moved to Appleton where his dad had a job offer to be the town's first rabbi.

Known as "The World's Greatest Escape Artist," Houdini first performed in what was considered the lowest form of show business. But as he began to impress the crowds, his fame grew. After years on the road and performing all over the world, Houdini's stunts wore him down, and he retired. But just a few years after his retirement, Houdini offered $1,000 to anyone who had something that could hold him, and he began performing again.

In addition to performing on stage, Houdini took his act outside and performed dangerous water escapes. Throughout his life, Houdini suffered many breaks and sprains to his bones and body.

Houdini's later years were spent trying to uncover the truth concerning con artists who robbed people of their money by saying they could contact the spirit world.

Just like his life, there are many stories about Houdini's death. But he actually died of a ruptured appendix on October 31, 1926, in Detroit.

Chester Migrant Education Key To Increasing College Enrollment

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

KENNETT SQUARE (Chester Co.) — Migrant education programs continue to show great strides in this and nearby communities.

Last year, only four migrant students were honored with Congressional Awards, volunteering time to help at various outreach program events.

But this year, 31 students, 24 from migrant families (and seven former migrant families) are participating in the program, noted Madeline "Lynn" Alden, student support specialist for the Migrant Education Program at the Chester County Intermediate Unit.

Several of those same students, with help from Penn State extension in Chester County, migrant education programs, industry, and the work of scores of adult volunteers, also participated in mid-December at the "Las Posadas" ("the shelters") celebration at the Kennett Square American Legion Hall.

The event marks the Biblical significance of the "Inn," or the acceptance of Christ's birth, before Christmas.

Eighteen Avon Grove High School students volunteered completely of their transportation and time to earn volunteer credits for the Congressional Award.

Alden, a certified Spanish teacher, joined the Chester County Migrant Education program 21 years ago after teaching in the districts. She's been to Mexico twice.

Of concern to Alden is the simple fact that to get college scholarships in the U.S., immigrants must have some way of obtaining legal residency. She knows of one boy who is gifted in art who cannot obtain legal status to obtain a visa to obtain scholarships.

The work of some programs in cooperative extension in Chester County has gone a long way in promoting ways in which the migrant youth can grasp opportunities for self-improvement. The 4-H programs have provided ways to connect families together — promoting the vision of extension with the goals of migrant education.

Laurie Szoke, Chester County, extension 4-H coordinator, noted the difference in the ways Mexican communities do their part to raise children. In Mexico, raising a child is indeed a community effort. The sense of family is strong and is really what binds the culture together.

Early last year, Szoke traveled to the rural area of Cerro Del Guayabo, a volcanic, agrarian area about four hours southwest of Mexico City. She traveled with Elizabeth Garduno and Juan Avila, active in the 4-H and migrant education programs here in Chester County.

Once in Mexico, despite having no formal Spanish language training, Szoke said she was "accepted without question.

"Something very magical happened. We didn't need the language."

Szoke said that the country's sense of people, understanding the barriers, and working through them helped her.

And 4-H's vision of working with "head, heart, hands, and health" was widely understood by the Mexican communities.

Many areas of Mexico are completely rural, totally agrarian, and there is little under standing of U.S. culture. Many people live in "Ranchitos," or clusters of homes making up a village. Those communities recognize the strength of spirit inherent in families and don't rely so heavily on government- funded programs, liability- directed initiatives, and complex technology.

Szoke recalled one day when the car broke down, carrying a pregnant woman and others. Szoke found herself getting frustrated, but they told her, "If the car doesn't work, God will." Their belief in God binds their society.

"And with 4-H programs over there, this creates a sense of belonging," she said.

"The language issue is a big deal," she said. People are tasked with having to actually "think" in the language of others and then communicate their own ideas. But with the help of migrant education, 4-H, and volunteers in the Chester County community, that barrier, she believes, can come down.

Perhaps, Szoke believes, that a program to provide English as a Second Language (ESL)-type programs to immigrant families coming from Mexico, before they arrive, can begin.

Szoke cited the work of Jim Esham, 4-H volunteer in the arts, and his work with photography. Esham was taking photos at Las Posadas and has worked with migrant students, helping develop and nurture photography skills.

Maribel Gonzalez, student support specialist with the Chester County Migrant Education Program, is standing with a musician from St. Agnes Church in West Chester. Jim Esham snapped this photo.

In the past, migrant education program graduates had little opportunities. Many have had to deal with many issues in society so having them volunteer shows how the barriers are falling.

In June last year, four Avon Grove High School ESL seniors participated in the Hispanics for Academic Program (HAP) with 20 other seniors.

HAP, sponsored by Pennsylvania's Migrant Education Program, allows ESL students the chance to experience life at college. The HAP Program is hosted by Penn State.

The students were Karen Beltran, Sandra Almanza, Soledad Duran, and Maria Fatima-Olvera.

The Avon Grove High School seniors stayed at the university from June 29-Aug. 4 at no cost.

Said Alden, the camp program, along with several other Penn State- based programs, "help bring some of the young people from Mexico to college."

Eleven of the students under the Congressional Award Program will apply to college in the fall — nine of them to Penn State, Alden noted. Of the four who attended HAP at Penn State, according to Alden, all four will apply to Penn State and other universities.

4-H HAPPENINGS

North Mountain 4-H Club

North Mountain is asking the community to help the club out in the Ronald McDonald Food Drive for the children at the Ronald McDonald House. It would be very much appreciated if people from around the community would contribute food items, such as canned vegetables, peanut butter, canned spaghetti, canned fruits, rice, noodles, and items that are non-perishable. Bring all your food items to the next meeting Jan. 29 at the Water Works Firehall between 6 p.m.-8 p.m.

During the week between Christmas and New Year, members from the club traveled to the Mennonite Central Committee in Ephrata and packed boxes of food, clothing, soap, health kits, newborn kits, and shoes to send to countries around the world in need of assistance. Serbia, Iraq, countries in Africa, etc. benefit from this. In February, a family bowling night will be conducted at the Palmyra Recreation Center from 6 p.m.-8 p.m.

The new projects for this year are pygmy goats and backyard poultry. Anybody can do these two projects if you are between the ages of 8-19.

The 4-H club has elected new officers: president, Natalie Funk; vice president, Emily Whitmoyer; secretary, Heather Meyer; treasurer, Anna Meyer; news reporter, Kate Gerber; and games, Amanda Ebersole, Liz Smith and Mary Ellen Whitmoyer.

Teens Attend National 4-H Congress

Sasha Kinney, Drexel Hill, a student at Upper Darby High School and Joyce Lewandowski of Broomall, student at Marple Newtown High School, recently returned from Atlanta, Ga. where they participated in the 2000 National 4-H Congress.

They represented Delaware County and were part of a 47-member delegation from Pennsylvania. This event was attended by more than 1,300 teens from 47 states and one U.S. territory.

The four-day event was full of interesting events, excellent workshops, and well-known speakers. The National 4-H Congress has a long history of providing a quality educational and multicultural experience to address the needs and issues of youth ages 15-19, while helping to develop capable, competent, and caring citizens.

Every 4-H member that attended participated in one day of community service as well as donating a new children's book to be distributed to local children's hospitals. Members also made 120 poplar fleece jackets during the conference to donate to the Carrie Steel Pitts Children's Home.

Attendees had the pleasure of hearing several outstanding and notable speakers. Each speaker had a powerful message that focused on the positive attributes of youth to society. The speakers encouraged all 4-H members to make a difference in their community and throughout the world.

During the four days in Atlanta, there was also plenty of fun to be had. In addition to dances every night, there were tours of Coca-Cola World and Centennial Olympic Park, as well as optional tours to a variety of local and historical sites. The International Dinner with foods and displays from around the world is always a highlight with the youth.

Another highlight was the 4-H member audience for Monday's CNN Talk Back Live show. 4-H members had a chance to voice their opinions on national television. They also received a tour of the CNN studio.

Cumberland County

The newly elected Cumberland County Council members have been very busy with plans and activities for the 2001 4-H year.

First, on Nov. 30, the officers held a planning meeting to review officer responsibilities and to discuss possible programs for upcoming months. Shortly after, on Dec. 4, county council members made Christmas a little merrier by singing Christmas carols and giving greeting cards to residents at the Claremont Nursing and Rehabilitation Center on Claremont Drive, Carlisle.

Most recently, on Jan. 7, county council members took part in a regional 4-H promotion booth entitled "Picture Yourself in 4-H" at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg.

Children were able to have their picture taken with the Penn State Nittany Lion. A list of all county 4-H agents and their corresponding addresses and phone numbers were provided on the reverse of each computer-generated picture.

Hosting A Super Bowl Party Is As Easy As Hut...Hut...Hike!

Six Winning Party Plays

Football fans from coast-to-coast will huddle up to the television for Super Bowl XXXV on Jan. 28. Both fair-weather and hard-core fans know the Super Bowl is more than just a game — it's an excuse to dress up in team gear, party with friends and eat sporty food like pizza and nachos.

In fact, people watching the Super Bowl consume 30.4 million pounds of snack food!

So this year, kick off your own Super Bowl celebration with the following play-by-play:

• Warm Up — Limit gameday preparations by shopping for groceries and cooking in advance. Touchdown Calzones (recipe follows), filled with Italian sausage, pizza sauce and smooth mozzarella cheese, are baked in a sealed crust and can be refrigerated days before serving. Guests will enjoy the hearty combination and hosts will enjoy the time saved on gameday.

• Pre-Game — Tackle party set-up before guests arrive. Rearrange furniture to accommodate large groups. Make sure every spectator has an unobstructed view of the television. Place snacks on an accessible table to keep the munchies line short.

• Playing Field — Use team colors for paper tablecloths, napkins and plastic silverware. Hit the sporting goods store for team memorabilia. A football on a tee makes a creative centerpiece for a table draped with pennants. Use helmets to hold chips or bread and offer team flag toothpicks for spearing cheese cubes and fruit pieces.

• Kick Off — Welcome each guest with a festive bag of party necessities like pom-poms, a noise-maker and a bottle opener sporting the favorite team's logo. Include wet wipes for sticky fingers and aspirin for pain relief during stressful plays.

• Instant Replay — When it comes to championship appetites, football fans give the pros a run for the money. Serve easy-to-make food on serving trays like Running Back Blues (recipe follows), a hefty sandwich made with dark rye, tangy blue and buttery Swiss cheese, roast beef, red onion and pickle spears. Make an extra tray of sandwiches ahead of time for quick turnover during the game.

TOUCHDOWN CALZONES

Filling:
- 1-¼ pounds spicy Italian sausage
- ¾ cup pizza sauce
- 4 cups (16 ounces) shredded Italian cheese blend

Dough:
- 1 package (16 ounce) hot roll mix
- 1-¼ cups hot water
- 2 tablespoons olive oil

Garlic butter:
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ teaspoon minced garlic
- ¼ cup shredded Parmesan cheese

For filling, remove sausage from casing. Saute sausage in large skillet, breaking up with fork, until sausage is cooked and browned, five to eight minutes. Drain well and set aside.

Preheat oven to 375°F. Make hot roll mix according to package directions for pizza, replacing egg and butter with hot water and olive oil. Let dough stand five minutes. Divide dough into eight pieces. Roll each piece into an oval about 5 x 7-inches. Place ¼ cup of Italian cheese blend in center of each oval. Top with ⅓ cup cooked sausage. Spoon one tablespoon pizza sauce over sausage. Sprinkle with another ¼ cup cheese. Bring up edges of dough and seal securely. Transfer calzone to lightly greased baking sheet, placing seam side up to form a "football" shape. Repeat with remaining dough and filling. Set calzones in a warm place to rise, covered with towel, 25 minutes. Bake until lightly browned, about 20 minutes.

In a small skillet, heat butter and garlic over low heat until butter is melted and garlic is tender, about three minutes. Remove calzones from oven when lightly browned. Brush hot calzones with garlic butter and sprinkle each with ½ tablespoon Parmesan cheese.~ Return to oven until cheese melts, about two minutes. Let stand five minutes before serving.

~To make "football laces" on calzones, cut thinly sliced mozzarella into thin strips. Arrange on calzones after brushing on garlic butter and sprinkling with Parmesan cheese.

Calzones can be baked and refrigerated up to two days in advance. Reheat at 350° F until hot, about 20 minutes.

END-ZONE CALZONES

Filling:
- ½ cup chopped onion
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- ½ teaspoon crushed red pepper
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 package (16 ounces) frozen chopped spinach, thawed, squeezed dry
- 3 cups (12 ounces) Monterey Jack cheese, shredded
- 1 cup (4 ounces) Parmesan cheese, shredded
- ½ cup sour cream

Dough:
- 1 package (16 ounces) hot roll mix
- 1-¼ cups hot water
- 2 tablespoons olive oil

Garlic butter:
- 2 tablespoons butter
- ½ teaspoon minced garlic
- ¼ cup shredded Parmesan cheese

For filling, saute onion, garlic and red pepper in butter in medium skillet until tender, about five minutes. Stir in spinach, cheeses and sour cream; remove from heat.

Preheat oven to 375°F. Make hot roll mix according to package directions for pizza, replacing egg and butter with hot water and olive oil. Let dough stand five minutes. Divide dough into eight pieces. Roll each piece into an oval about 5 x 7-inches. Place ½ cup cheese filling in center of oval; bring up edges and seal securely. Transfer calzone to a lightly greased baking sheet, placing seal side up to form a "football" shape. Repeat with remaining dough and filling. Set calzones in warm place to rise, covered with towel, 25 minutes. Bake until lightly browned, about 20 minutes.

In a small skillet, heat butter and garlic over low heat until butter is melted and garlic is tender, about three minutes. Remove calzones from oven when lightly browned. Brush hot calzones with garlic butter and sprinkle each with ½ tablespoon Parmesan cheese. Return to oven until cheese melts, about two minutes. Let stand five minutes before serving.

RUNNING BACK BLUE CHEESE BITES

- ½ cup (4 ounces) butter, softened
- 2 cups (8 ounces) crumbled blue or Gorgonzola cheese
- ¼ cup cooked bacon, crumbled
- 6 slices pumpernickel or dark rye bread
- 6 slices Swiss cheese
- 6 slices deli roast beef
- 6 thin slices red onion
- 6 dill pickle spears

In a small bowl, beat butter and blue cheese until smooth; mix in bacon. Spread about ¼ cup mixture on each slice of bread and top with a slice of Swiss cheese.~ Place on baking sheet and broil, four-inches from heat source, until cheese is melted, about one minute. Top each with roast beef, onion and pickle and serve open-faced.

Sandwiches can be prepared to this point and refrigerated three hours before serving.

Calzones can be baked and refrigerated up to two days in advance. Reheat at 350°F until hot, about 20 minutes.

Kick Off Football Festivities With Super-Safe Buffet

NEWARK, Del. — Getting the crowd together to watch the Super Bowl is a great way to entertain, and serving food buffet style lets hosts and guests enjoy the game together.

Harmful bacteria can grow quickly in buffet table foods, however, cautions Dr. Sue Snider, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension food safety specialist. Remembering a few simple rules of food safety, she reminds Super Bowl party givers, will prevent food related illness from spoiling the party.

"Disease-causing bacteria grow between 40 degrees F and 140 degrees F," Snider says. "So make sure hot foods stay hot and cold foods stay cold."

"Crockery cookers are great for holding hot foods like soups, meatballs in tomato sauce or roast beef and gravy," she continues. "Electric fry pans set on a 'low' or 'warm' setting work much the same way to maintain foods at a safe temperature. Placing platters of food on warming trays and using aluminum containers or chafing dishes over hot water or cans of solid fuel can also ensure safe food temperatures."

Keep cold foods such as potato or macaroni salad, cole slaw or cold meats in the refrigerator, set out in small containers and replace — not replenish — as needed, Snider says, adding that any food with a cream base be treated in the same way.

"Place the food in bowls or on trays and arrange those containers in aluminum pans or coolers filled with ice or in insulated thermal serving pieces," she suggests.

Include foods that don't require being kept hot or cold is a good idea for buffets, Snider says. Good examples are uncut fruit such as grapes, cheese and cracker assortments, and smoked meats such as pepperoni or summer sausages.

So invite the gang over and relax at your Super Bowl buffet get-together. A little extra care in advance will keep football cheer on the table and eliminate foodborne illness from the guest list.

More hints for a food-safe buffet:

- Wash hands thoroughly before, during and after touching foods.
- Keep raw perishable foods separate from ready-to-eat foods.
- Keep cold foods at temperatures lower than 40 degrees F.
- Keep hot foods at temperatures higher than 140 degrees F.
- Discard foods not used within two hours.
- When in doubt, throw it out!

Education, Encouragement, Ethics Focus Of Judges' School

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — More than 100 Judges' School participants experienced a blue-ribbon day as they received instruction on how to judge during two sessions at the Hershey Convention Center.

Representing fairs from all over Pennsylvania, these adult students received instruction in judging preserved foods, baked goods, crocheting and knitting, apiary, wine and beer, grains and hay, photography, and crafts and ceramics.

The day opened with a presentation from Claudia Payne, who retired from the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension after 23 years. She now serves on the Maryland State Fair Board.

Payne, who has been involved in extension work for 37 years, first touched on the philosophy of judging. "We need to have firmly in our minds a rationale, a justification, of why we do fair judging."

For Education

She encouraged judges to take the opportunity to "say we're doing this for the purpose of education — to encourage, inspire, and uplift."

The fair, said Payne, is an experiential learning experience. "Not just the exhibitors but everyone who is involved learns," said Payne. Exhibitors learn as they talk with judges and read written comments, judges learn as they as they partner up with another judge and exchange ideas, and the public learns as they read standards posted at the fair.

Preparation for judging, mentally and physically, was Payne's second topic.

"When you accept responsibility to judge, when you arrive to begin judging, you are a member of the fair. The public sees you and responds to you as part of the fair. The image you project is a fair image, so protect it and represent the fair at its best all the time. Judges should portray a positive attitude, especially about the fair."

Additionally Payne told school participants that judges should give full concentration to each exhibit. To avoid causing worry for supervisors, judges should report in as soon as they are on the grounds.

Payne also encouraged the future judges to not make an appointment for later in the day, as the judging may take more time than originally estimated.

Pointers and hints for superintendents and department managers from Payne's presentation help make life for judges a little easier. Officials should invite judges early and be exact with the date, location, best guess on time needed to judge, and an outline of the benefits and compensations. Supervisors should also send a map, parking pass, and fair book with classes indicated.

Payne told the school to ask for the age of the exhibitors they will be judging, "so you have a fix on who you will be working with." She also suggested that the judges ask for a complete breakdown of the classes to find out exactly what exhibits they will be evaluating, in case this list is not sent by the supervisor.

In addition judges should ask about the style of judging, whether it is open, closed, critique or interview judging. Judges should also be familiar with the standards, requirements, and reward system before beginning judging.

To Encourage Encouraging the exhibitors should be priority with each judge. "It's so important that we do the kinds of things that make people want to come back again and again. That's done by lifting people, inspiring people.

"When we bring something to exhibit, we bring a piece of ourselves to be judged," Payne said. Consequently "it's important that we respect the work of other people and be accepting of what people are bringing to us."

Skill levels differ, said Payne, and a judge must respect what exhibitors bring as their best work. "Refrain from making negative comments about exhibits."

Understandably, judges must also be completely impartial, stressed Payne. Judges need to operate so that "when they (exhibitors) look at us they don't have a question whether or not we're doing things fair and equally with all people who bring exhibits to us," she said.

Ethics also include not judging exhibits a judge is not comfortable with. A judge should also have adequate backing for their statements and judgments about each exhibit.

Strong likes and dislikes should be kept to oneself, said Payne. Judges should hold items according to a standard of excellence. Additionally, she said, learn how to make decisions quickly and with confidence."

Honey, Hay And Grains

Lee Miller, from the Beaver County extension service, instructed the apiary session of the school. In light of the 1.5 million pounds of honey produced in Pennsylvania, and its important economic contributions with wax and pollination, Miller encouraged fairs to feature honey displays in prominent areas and backlight honey jars for an attractive, informative presentation.

"By bringing bees and products and giving them a prominent place, that shows increasing acceptance and importance of honey," said Miller, who also suggested that criteria for judging should be written in fairbooks.

Paul Craig, Dauphin County extension service, emphasized "evaluation by factual analysis." to school participants in the grains and hay school. He spoke of the work participants put into their exhibits to pick out and display the best harvest possible. In the ear corn classes, Craig said that a judge needs no less than six ears to accurately determine uniformity and quality of the exhibit.

Craig suggested that silage and haylage classes be added to the grain and hay classes already at the fair, since commercial farmers are moving in that direction.

Crafts, Wine

"Form follows function," was the rule of thumb for Joyce Wyatt's instruction for crafts and ceramics. "For example, an automobile with square wheels is the wrong form because it wouldn't function with the car — everything has to fit together." Wyatt illustrated her point with a nearby bench. "For example, with this bench, the theme and the shape works together."

Wyatt also looks for originality of the project, and rewards the exhibitors "who came up with ideas of their own, not copied, not something that everyone else in town has one of."

Participants in Kari Skrip's wine and beer class swirled, tilt-

"You have to tune your mind clear of preferences and judge on the quality of the exhibit itself," said baked goods instructor Hazel Stahley (apron, in background). "Forget what you like and go by quality."

Annie Clark, Whitneyville, gave participants a broad judging experience with a wide variety of muffins and breads.

Don't Give Up On Fiber

(NAPS) — For nearly 30 years, studies have associated a diet high in fiber with the reduced risk of heart disease and certain cancers. Researchers continue to study fiber and its usefulness in maintaining good health.

Recent media attention surrounding two recent studies, however, may have left people with a mistaken impression about fiber. The results of these studies should be viewed cautiously, since they in no way suggest that people should forget about the value of fiber. In fact, most health experts, including the studies' lead investigators, emphasize that people should continue to eat a low-fat, fiber-rich diet high in fruits, vegetables, grains and beans to improve overall health and reduce the risk of chronic diseases. The bottom line? Fiber has many virtues.

Intestinal health — Fiber stimulates the muscles in your intestine, which helps keep them toned and functioning smoothly. This action helps prevent diverticulosis — a disease that weakens the walls of the intestine and causes them to bulge out and potentially become irritated. And, of course, fiber reduces the risk of constipation and hemorrhoids.

Heart health — When combined with a low-fat diet, fiber can help lower cholesterol in the blood by reducing how much of it is absorbed by the body. Some experts believe dietary fiber binds with cholesterol, making it less absorbable. The precise mechanism responsible for the cholesterol-lowering effect of soluble fiber is unclear.

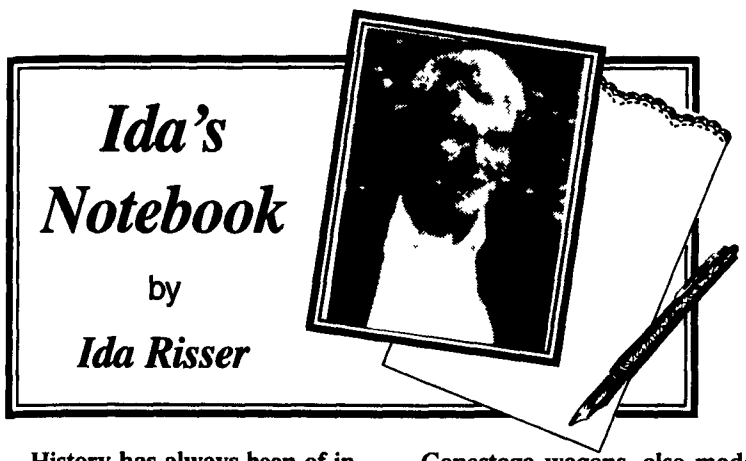
Eating a high-fiber diet also can help reduce the amount of fat you eat. A recent study found that men, who ate two bowls of high-fiber cereal every day for 12 weeks without altering their diets in any other way, lowered the amount of fat they normally ate by ten percent.

Diabetes benefits — A fiber-rich diet may help control blood-sugar levels. The fiber found in fruits, vegetables, beans (legumes) and certain grains such as oats and barley may slow the absorption of sugar into the blood. The result is a more even rise in blood sugar after a meal — good news for people with diabetes who may otherwise need to take medication to keep their blood-sugar levels under control. A small study done last year found that participants who ate 50 grams of fiber (including 13 servings of fruits, vegetables, grains and beans) lowered their blood sugar levels by ten percent. They also reduced their cholesterol, which helps lower the risk for heart disease.

Weight control benefits — Fiber-rich foods are filling and tend to contain fewer calories than high-fat, high-sugar foods. Therefore, eating a high-fiber diet usually leaves little room for more calorie-rich foods.

Because a high-fiber diet helps keep blood-sugar levels in line, it may also reduce food cravings. Researchers in Australia found that when study participants ate a high-fiber diet, they ate fewer calories yet reported feeling more satisfied following their meals than when they ate high-fat, fiber-poor cakes, rolls and candies.

Great start toward total nutrition — There is still a case for fiber and a lower risk of colon cancer. Hundreds of studies have supported the theory, but regardless of its affect on colon cancer, fiber still has many other perks. Choose five or more servings of fruits and vegetables a day and three or more servings of whole-grain foods.



History has always been of interest to me. My ancestors and my husband's ancestors have lived in Lancaster County since the early 1700s.

At that time, most of the county, known as Penn's Woods, was covered by large trees. The first job was to use them to build shelter and then to clear enough land to plant crops for survival.

Many streams in the county had mills build along them. Some were flour or grist mills, hemp mills, clover mills, bone mills, cider mills, even wool mills. There were five mills near the village of Oregon where I live. My great, great grandfather, Benjamin Landis, owned one for 21 years.

At one time, a lot of flax was grown in Lancaster County. It was a necessity as they had to make their own clothes. As years went by, the flour was shipped to Philadelphia and other large towns.

Conestoga wagons, also made in Lancaster County, were used to transport the finished product. When they returned they brought necessities such as gunpowder, kettles, and salt.

The early settlers did not have an easy life as almost everything they had needed to be provided for by themselves. It was important to have good neighbors.

Lancaster County became a separate county in 1729. A 500-acre tract owned by Andrew Hamilton was laid out and became Lancaster Townstead. Formerly it was known as Hickory Town.

Local Indian tribes traded with the settlers. In 1744, Indian chiefs throughout the East came to Lancaster to sign a treaty promising to be loyal to the English in the French War of 1744-48. We were known as a gateway to the West.

ROAST BEEF TORTA WITH SPICY MAYONNAISE

¼ cup mayonnaise
1-1½ tablespoons hot sauce
¼ cup cilantro, chopped
16-ounce loaf French bread, cut in half horizontally
1 pound thinly sliced medium-rare roast beef
Salt to taste
5-ounce package sliced cheese
½ bunch lettuce leaves, rinsed, patted dry
1 large ripe avocado, peeled, pitted, thinly sliced

Combine mayonnaise, hot sauce, and cilantro in small bowl. Hollow out some of the interior of bread with fingertips. Generously spread spicy mayonnaise mixture on both cut sides of bread.

Layer roast beef over the bottom half of the bread. Sprinkle lightly with salt. Top with sliced cheese, arugula leaves, and avocado slices. Sprinkle lightly with salt. Place top half of bread in place and press lightly to close sandwich. Cut into 2-3-inch portions and serve.

Landing A Job

Looking for a job is hard work. Whether it's your first job or one of many, you'll likely face rejection several times. You'll also spend lots of time marketing yourself to potential employers. A typical job search can take weeks or even months.

To get a job these days, you must convince employers that you have the necessary skills and experience. This is generally done in writing and/or in person. Below are some tips:

Resumes Keep it short. Two pages maximum. One page is better.

Use an outline format with short phases.

Neatness counts! A resume should be typed and printed on white or cream bond paper.

Proofread carefully for typos, spelling, and grammatical errors.

List your present job first and work backwards. Stress accomplishments and skills.

Include your name, home and business address, and phone numbers. Do not include personal data such as marital status.

Include key words from a job announcement. Some employers are scanning resumes with computers to screen qualified candidates.

Send a cover letter with a resume. Describe your qualifications and interest in an employer. Close with a request for an interview.

Avoid using the word "I" in a cover letter. It gives the impression that you are concerned only about yourself.

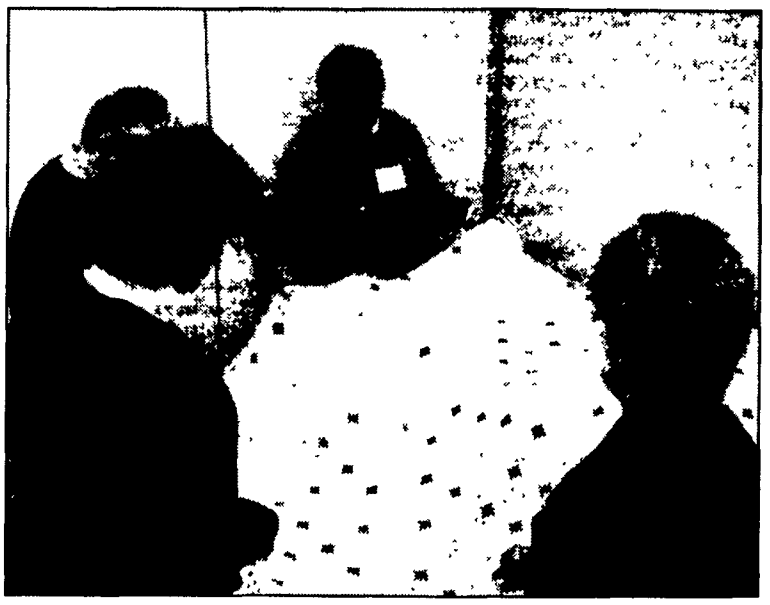
Interviews: Do your homework. Research potential employers and learn about their products.

Use the interviewer's last names (such as "Mr. Jones") from time to time.

Watch the tone of your voice. Avoid ending sentences on a higher tone so they sound like a question.

Be positive. When asked about previous employers, say something nice.

Send a thank-you note a few days later. It's a way to "sell" yourself and include information.



The back side of exhibits may reveal true colors, as participants in the crocheting and knitting class discovered. Judges' school students carefully examined several examples for seams, consistency in pattern and colors, or errant threads.

examined several examples for seams, consistency in pattern and colors, or errant threads.

Fulmer, who has been judging for 20 years, not only crochets and knits but also teaches the crafts. "I just love to look at what other people do. Judging at a fair is one of the best places to get ideas for yourself," she said. "It's great."

Cooking, Photography

Hazel Stahley, Gaithersburg, Md., and Annie Clark, Whitneyville, instructed the baked goods portion of the school. Participants evaluated the tastes, textures, flavor, and appearance of several different kinds of confections and breads. Learning proper baking techniques has been a lifelong process for Stahley, who began as a 4-H'er and with instruction from her mother.

Stahley, who has judged for 25 years, pointed out cakes which were not mixed properly or were not baked long enough and had a wet spot. Stahley also suggested sniffing the cakes, since some exhibitors smoke while they bake cakes, lending a distinctive odor to the cake.

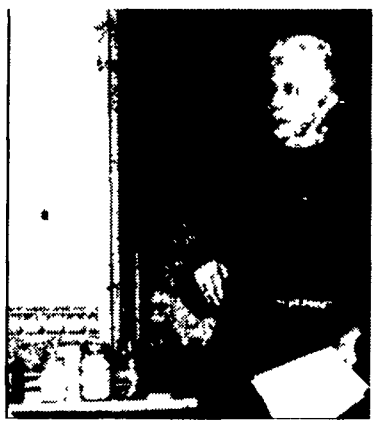
To tell the difference between a boxed angel food cake and a homemade cake, check the way the cake cracks on the top, she said. A boxed cake will have a star-like pattern while a homemade cake will crack in an almost-perfect ring.

"You have to tune your mind clear of preferences and judge on the quality of the exhibit itself," she said. As students tasted the cookies, she advised, "forget what you like and go by quality."

"It's nice to get together like this and learn. I can pick up a lot of things from these people. It doesn't matter how small or large a fair is, if you keep an open mind you'll learn something."

Clark used the same generic brand muffin mix and added different ingredients to challenge the baked good judges with several varieties of confections.

"If you've judged, you'll soon develop your own philosophy and own methods of weeding out the good, the bad, and the in-between," said preserved foods instructor Rainy Linn. University research used by the USDA provided the criteria for judging those classes.



Preserved foods instructor Rainy Linn taught how to distinguish the best canned foods at the fair.

Jars should have 1 — 1½ of head space, no foreign matter, and have a clear, bright, and natural liquid. According to Linn, jelly should quiver, jam should be spreadable, pickles should be crisp, and dried fruit should be chewable in the canned food competition.

In the photography class Howard Hoch, Oley, helped participants learn to evaluate subject matter, impact, and degree of difficulty. He is the department chairperson of the photography department for the Oley fair.

"Take into consideration what the photographer had to do to get that shot," said Hoch. "If you want that different impact, you're going to try to get that different angle."

Hoch also discussed photograph categories and how action, animals, portrait, children, still life or digital pictures should fit into each category.

The event was conducted in conjunction with the 89th annual convention sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Association of County Fairs and the Pennsylvania State Showmen's Association.

USING THE RSI AND OTHER OSCILLATORS TO ANALYZE THE MARKET

John Berry
Ag Marketing Educator
Lehigh County

Stochastic oscillators are called oscillators because they form a band across the bottom of a chart with a line that moves, or oscillates, above and below a midpoint.

Because an established trend line tends to continue indefinitely, it often is a reliable indicator of future prices. During market price uptrends, a producer wants to own grain that is increasing in value. In downtrends, investors are slow to invest money and quick to protect it. Oscillators are a market indicator that can predict when a producer should sell grain increasing in value and hold grain that is not.

In an uptrend's early stages, prices move steadily upward. As the trend continues, prices begin to move more rapidly as larger numbers of traders — expecting prices to continue to increase — jump into the market. Then, however, prices lose momentum as too few buyers are willing to pay higher prices. The prices move more slowly while holders of rights to receive a commodity (longs) stay in the market to reap further price increases, while other traders leave the market.

Finally exhausted, the prices stop moving up and turn downward. The downtrend produces a similar pattern, but it may be steeper than in the uptrend. If traders know when prices are losing momentum, they probably can respond to that reversal signal to increase their profitability position. In most cases, producers can forecast the end of the trend by plotting the changing movement of the market.

In short, oscillators are designed to measure the underlying strength of a price movement in the market. They measure changes in price rather than just the price level. This is done by measuring the distance of a price change within a time period and assessing if it is significant enough to signal the trader to take market action.

Oscillators usually are used in conjunction with other trend analysis tools. They are most valuable in a non-trending market with prices fluctuating within a trading range. All oscillators have similar charts. There is a base at the bottom and a midline around which the prices oscillate. Good charts can provide valuable information to the trader, but by themselves do not yield enough clues to ensure good trades. Successful traders must know how to get into and out of the market at the right time to catch the move they are looking for.

Several types of oscillators are available to help traders measure the timing for trades. The Relative Strength Index (RSI) and a stochastic oscillator are among those most frequently used.

RSI

The RSI looks at the average of the up closes and the average of the down closes for a given period. A 14-day segment is commonly used, but the user may select the number of days.

The RSI attempts to identify overbought and oversold markets running out of momentum. A standard scale of zero to 100 is used. The RSI uses an exponential moving average — smooths out inconsistent movement and gives the most weight to recent data while not eliminating the old data. A producer needs to think about the degree of sensitivity desired when he or she chooses boundary lines. These lines represent overbought and oversold conditions. When the RSI crosses these lines, it indicates the market is losing strength and probably will change direction.

Many traders use the 70 line for the upper and the 30 line for the lower boundary, but some believe this range is too sensitive. Producers commonly use upper and lower boundaries of 65 and 35, respectively. The RSI is a leading indicator. Its highs and lows normally precede market tops and bottoms. It confirms changes in momentum, especially fading momentum, signaling an imminent change in market direction. The RSI also alerts the investor to periods of recent price movement that include insignificant true market movement.

Consistent use of the RSI shows long term trend formations similar to bar chart formations. With a little thought and effort, producers can draw support and resistance lines. Again: producers should watch for the RSI to change price direction as a strong signal of market change.

Other Oscillators

Stochastic oscillators forecast market changes by measuring the relative position of the closing price within the daily price range.

For example, while buyers in a bull market are stronger than sellers and push prices up at the end of the trading day, this pattern weakens toward the end of a trend. If the market prices continue to go up but the closing price is moving toward the low end of the price range, the trader should watch for changing markets.

A bear market will see a similar pattern in reverse. When reading the charts, the overbought conditions are indicated near the top of the chart's range while the oversold conditions are near the bottom of the range.

To calculate the Stochastic indicator, subtract the total of the lows for 14 days from the last day's close. Subtract the total of the lows for the same 14 days from the total of the highs for the same 14 days. Divide the first number by the second. This number is then plotted on the graph. Many chart services carry the Stochastic graph at the bottom of their daily activity chart. These patterns usually have been smoothed out by using a moving average of raw stochastic data. Producers using charting services need to check their publications for the exact calculation of this oscillator.

Conclusion

Oscillators rarely are used alone as a market analysis tool. Each trader should develop a personalized combination of marketing tools that may well include oscillators. The producer's needs and time limitations are valid considerations. Producers who consider using the RSI or any of the other oscillators should think about subscribing to a charting service. The time saved may be well worth the expense.

Profitability is the ultimate test of any chosen combination of marketing tools. The trader using oscillators must remember that if prices gain too much velocity, the prices probably will become overextended and change direction.

Site Helps Troubleshoot Vegetable Problems

ITHACA, N.Y. — Is your asparagus ailing? Can your melons be suffering a malady? Find out what's hurting your corn and cucurbits at Vegetable MD Online, http://vegetablemdonline.ppath.cornell.edu, a free service of the Cornell University plant pathology department.

"I've always had an interest in popularizing the good production work we do at Cornell," said Thomas A. Zitter, Cornell professor of plant pathology and the Website's creator. 'It's been needed a long time," he said, noting that he is particularly proud of the site's vegetable disease photo gallery. "We have even better photos now that didn't appear in the original information sheets."

If you want to know about common blight in beans, a fact sheet describes its leaf symptoms and explains that it is caused by a bacterium. While warm, humid conditions favor the development of common blight, Vegetable MD Online said that even a trace of infected seed can infect an entire field.

Vegetable MD Online also was developed by Margaret McGrath, Cornell associate professor of plant pathology at the Long Island Horticulture Research and Extension Center, Riverhead, N.Y., and by Dawn Dailey-O'Brien, an extension support specialist in plant pathology.

Navigating the web site is easy. A click on "Diseases by Crops" finds the vegetable of interest displayed as seed packets, fact sheets available, together with photos of diseased tissue that can be magnified online. Zitter said pictures will be updated regularly so that variations in disease appearance can be included.

"We're trying to make the Website as user friendly as possible for commercial growers and homeowners," he said, observing that many Cornell Cooperative Extension educators send him digital images of new diseases in the field for web publication.

Cabin Fever Expo:
An Extravaganza Of Men, Metal, Machine

Anthony K. Wikrent
Cabin Fever

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Looking for an alternative to the doldrums at the end of January? Then pack your bags, and set your course for Lebanon, where the father and son team of Gary and Jared Schoenly are holding the fifth annual Cabin Fever Expo, an extravaganza of men, metal, and machines (www.cabinfeverexpo.com).

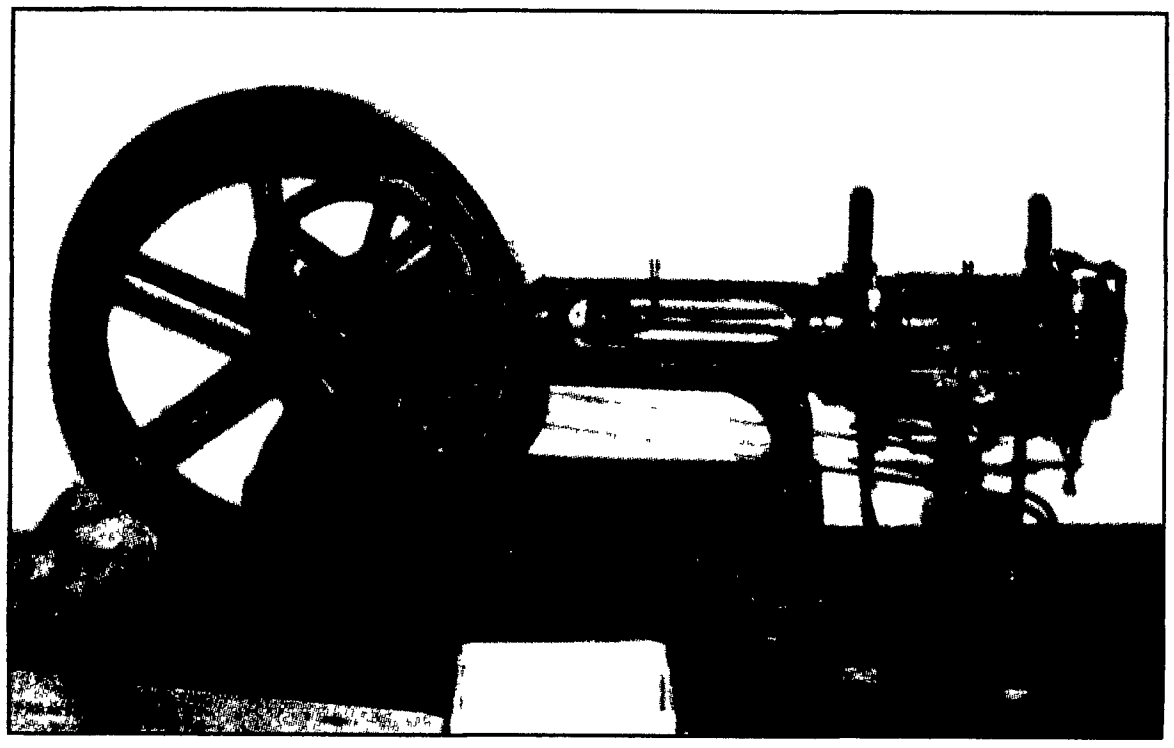
You can spend two full days exploring and admiring about 500 exhibits of working model engines — steam, gas, oil, hot air — and all types of metal working equipment and accessories for home shop machinists. With 50 vendors packing the hall, everything from engine kits, to dimensioned plans, to complete table-top machine tools will be available.

About 3,000 people attended last year's event. They came to see an astounding number and variety of precision made model engines. You can find the entire history of engine technology represented here, from the steam engines of the early 1800s, to the hot air and oil engines of the late 1800s, to more contemporary internal combustion engines, such as an Oldsmobile V-8 that's less than one-foot in length, to a working scale model of the 12-cylinder radial Curtiss-Wright Cyclone used to power bombers during World War II. The Reading Society of Model Engineers sets up a large scale railroad on which they run 1½-inch scale locomotives operating on live steam.

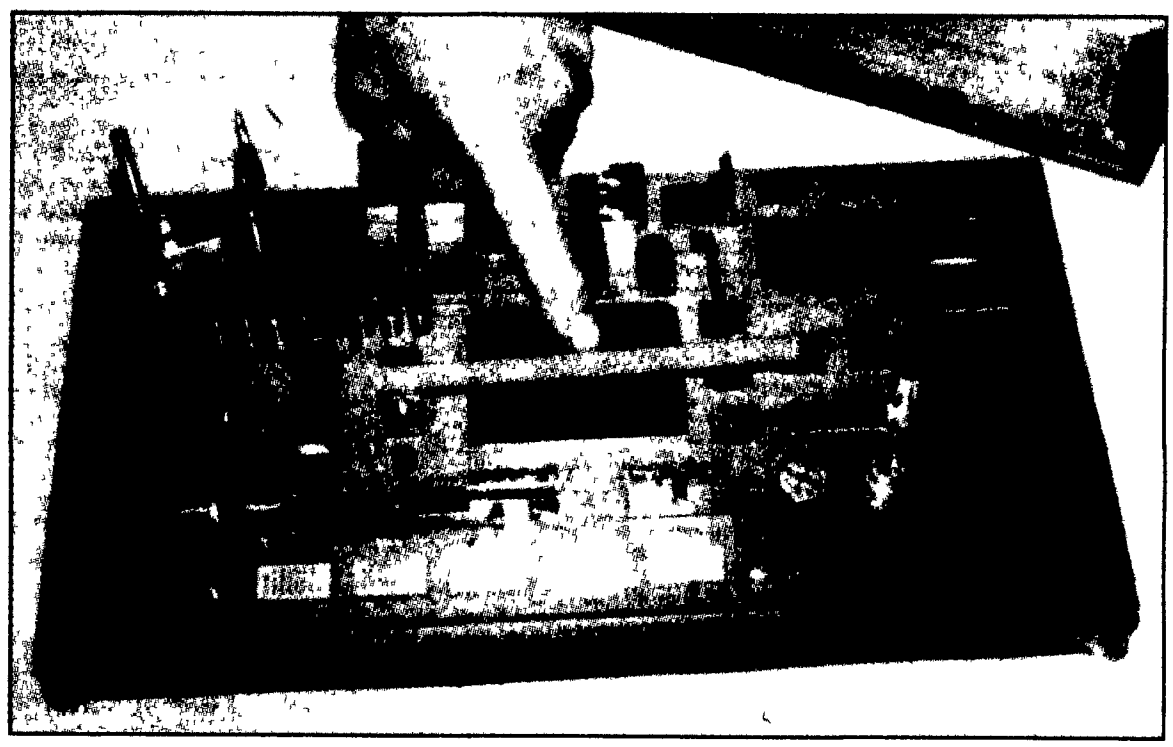
This is a showplace of skill, craftsmanship, and ingenuity. Many of the engines are completely handmade. And we mean completely: Many of the exhibitors had started by making wooden patterns for major components, such as engine blocks and manifolds, making the necessary mold, and carefully pouring molten metal themselves. A handful of these craftsmen cut even the nuts and bolts used in their creations. Such exactitude may be a bit much for some, but remember, these are guys doing machining because they love to do it, not because they're getting paid to.

Some of the modelers even work up their own designs and plans. One modeler had used the recently obtained underwater photographs of the engine room of the famous Civil War ship, Monitor (now laying half buried in the sea bottom off the North Carolina coast) to design and build a working scale replica of the unusual stream engine the famous inventor John Ericson had specially designed for the vessel.

Of course, there are plenty of the kit-built engines on display, as well. Some of the kits are extremely well done, and basically need only be bolted together to the correct torque. But most kits are rough castings that need a lot of machining and finishing to produce the jewels of craftsmanship that finally are put on display.



Just one of the hundreds of model engines that were exhibited at the fourth annual Cabin Fever Expo. You can get an idea of the size of this engine by comparing it to the holder full of business cards in the foreground at the bottom of the photo.



How much work goes into one of these model engines? This clever display at the fourth annual Cabin Fever Expo reveals the internal components of a model engine, as well as an idea of their small size. The fifth annual Cabin Fever Expo is being held in Lebanon, Jan. 27 and 28. Check the web site at www.cabinfeverexpo.com for more details.

The level of skill and craftsmanship evident in these engines can be intimidating. It's difficult to imagine having the time and patience to be able to build something as beautiful. That might discourage some people from bringing their own work to exhibit, but the Schoenlys will set them right in a hurry.

"I'm always finding guys who don't know about the show, or don't even know about the hobby," Gary says. "They think they're the only nutcase in the world that builds and collects this kind of stuff. This past weekend, I was at a nice country festival nearby. And there was a guy there, who's been to Cabin Fever every year. Just attending — he's never exhibited anything. And he's sitting there, at this festival, with a whole table of neat little engines he's built. So, I asked him why he's never brought them to Cabin Fever. And he said, 'Oh, you know, it's just stuff I built,' And I told him, 'You don't get it, do you?"

"That's just the point," Gary says with a huff of emphasis. "The point is to share whatever it is you've done with a bunch of people that do the same thing. They can appreciate your work, and help you make it better. Unfortunately, there's a lot of guys out there that think like that — they think that what they've built is not as good as what the guy next to them has."

Schoenly tells the story about a fellow who called him a few years ago, and asked if he could display some miniature lathes. "I was kind of suspicious," Schoenly says with a grin, "because I thought, oh, yeah, here's a guy that's going to try to sneak in with some stuff that he can sell. So I explained to him our set up and that he couldn't sell anything. And he said, that's fine, he just wants to exhibit his miniature lathes. I'm still kind of suspicious, but I tell him, 'yeah, come one and bring 'em.' So this real well dressed gentleman shows up — I think he's an attorney in New York or something, with a lot of steam behind him, and he completely fills an eight-foot table with these beautiful little lathes. They look like a big Monarch machine lathe, but they're only a foot long. And he had three tiers set up on that table. He had 25 or 30 of the neatest little lathes you had ever seen, complete with chucks, collet sets, and so on — all the accessories that the big boys have. And the guys went absolutely nuts. They didn't know that kind of stuff existed. They loved his stuff. Dan was completely amazed. He had thought that he was the only nut in the world that collected these things. He had the time of his life."

Gary Schoenly is easy to pick out in the crowd. He is a tall, massive man, with a jubilant beard and mustache, eyes sparkling with mischief, and a thunderous laugh. If this guy ain't Santa Claus, he surely has to be related. You can just see him in the North Pole workshops, roaring with delight at the latest and craziest mechanical marvels he and his elves have fabricated and assembled. You easily believe him when he explains that he and his son Jared put the show together each year, not to make money, but to promote the hobby of home shop machining and model engineering. "Our interest is the engines, in promoting the hobby," he says. "I would be hard pressed to name anyone who is making a living in the model business. There might be a few guys that are able to do it in the large scale live steam railroading. But that is because they have larger operations, and more work than just the model business."

That is true of most of the exhibitors, also. Asked if his show might be a good place to recruit new talent for a machine shop, Gary replies, "Realistically, I'd have to say it's not very likely. A lot of the guys who exhibit here are machinists by trade, but a fair percentage of them are running their own shop. They have their hands full already. So, the talent's there, for sure, but I don't know any one of them that's looking for a job."

In fact, Schoenly fears that their business concerns are perversely affecting some of these machinists from helping train a new generation. For the show in 2001, Gary explains, "I

Definitions Of Folk Art

Folk art is called "naive" and often, rightly so. Since it first became a fashionable collectible in the 1970s, a wide range of categories from sculpture, paintings and pottery, old and new, are classified "folk art."

You can spend a little or you can spend a lot. However, there are several things to consider before spending too much.

These days age doesn't necessarily make an item worth thousands of dollars. Some pieces are obviously worth every penny from hand-carved decoys to fancifully-painted whirligigs. Other times items are questionable and you have to ask yourself, "did someone's kid do it?"

Folk art comes in many guises. When it is 20th century it can be stone carving, chain saw carvings of wood, a simple painted plywood form such as the cars done by Howard Finster or carved and painted walking sticks and canes.

I am reminded of the tale of the Emperor's new clothes. To refresh your memory, the Emperor was sold a bill of goods in the form of an invisible robe. When he paraded it before his subjects, they applauded and praised its' elegance. All except for a child who said, "but, he isn't wearing anything."

It seems that today, folk art afficiendados and gallery owners seem to heap praise on anything that can be termed folk art. I well remember at an antique show a couple of years ago, one dealer proudly displayed some folk art paintings with price tags of $5,000 and up. As he explained to several admirers, "This is a new discovery. What makes his work so interesting is that he's color blind."

I believe it!

While many folk art artists, both 19th and 20th century are known by the style of their work and historical documentation, others are anonymous. One of the best known folk art carvers the 19th century is Wilhelm Schimmel of Pennsylvania. His roosters and eagles sell for thousands of dollars. But they are fine carvings done with imagination.

In the 1980s, a new type of folk art began to be seriously collected. Generally, it was made from found and discarded objects. A sculpture made of tin Coke bottle caps is an example.

Amusing yes! But worth the asking price of $1,500?

Initially, these artisans sold their items on country roads and city streets. The paintings of one Chicago bag lady were discovered by an art gallery dealing in what is now known as "outsider art." The last several years, examples of recent outsider art have found their way to auction houses, such as Sotheby's in New York.

Major collections can be seen in museums across the country. So are the painting of the late Grandma Moses, done in a wonderful primitive style that made her world famous, outsider art, folk art or both? She led the way for the hundreds of folk painters of the 20th century beginning in 1939 with an exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art. By the 1940s, she was world famous for her primitive paintings of memories of childhood New England Landscapes.

Clues: When buying folk art made before 1950, provenance is important. When buying contemporary art, find out if the artist is included in any reference books, has done shows, sold well at auction. Is the piece unusual or made of unique and unexpected materials?

I was attracted to a footed bowl made out of Popsicle sticks, discovered in a junk shop and priced at $5. Is it a fabulous work of art? Hardly, but it makes an interesting decorative accessory, when a Mexican pottery bowl is placed inside it. In otherwords, inexpensive pieces of folk art when bargain priced can be enjoyed. Ask yourself if the item has eye appeal — one of the qualities of folk art.

Items aren't always what they seem, such as black folk carvings. Many recently made black folk carvings coming from the Caribbean are being sold as American. Well, why not be the first to collect this category. It's still plentiful, and when sold as what it is, prices are on the low side.

Another problem comes when European folk art is sold as American. Since American folk art is more valuable, knowledge of styles and decorations are important. Many new "fakes" are artificially aged.

Fish decoys, being collected as folk art, are the perfect example of something becoming popular and then being reproduced. If you are buying supposedly old folk art, look for signs of age as you would in any other category. Overly-restored paintings and sculptures should be avoided, unless they are fantastic examples of this art form.

was trying to get one guy to give a class on hand scraping. He's got his own shop, and he's a whiz at scraping, but I think he's afraid that if he gives a class, he'll be snowed under by nickel and dime stuff, and he's got a business to run. And that's really unfortunate, because of that one kid out there who might have been interested."

Getting young people interested is a major concern of his, and Schoenly comes back to the theme often. He says more young people are being attracted, "but maybe I'm saying that because I want to believe it. But I know this for certain: the hobby's just not a bunch of retired guys anymore."

Schoenly is hopeful, because his own son, Jared, was drawn into the hobby by George Luhrs, an older machinist who eight years ago noticed the youngster's fascination with Luhrs' operating scale models of agricultural steam traction engines, and took the time to answer Jared's questions. Since then, father and son have spent most of each summer together, traveling to antique engine and tractor shows up and down the East Coast and throughout the Midwest buying, swapping, and selling old stationary engines. But what really captivated Jared's interest was the finely crafted model engines exhibited at the NAMES show in Wyandotte, Michigan each April. At some point, the idea occurred to them that there was as much interest in model engineering in the Mid-Atlantic area, as there was around Motor City. With Jared working just as hard as his father, and a lot of advice from founding members of NAMES, the two put together the first Cabin Fever Expo in January 1997, in the Farmers Market of Leesport, about eight miles north of Reading. The primary motive was not money, but it was a major concern. "We only had ten vendors," Gary recalls. "We were really wondering if anyone was going to show up, and if we were going to have enough from the door receipts to pay the bills." But the hard work — and earnestly heeded advice — paid off, with almost 1,000 people paying to get through the door. With attendance nearly tripling since, the event has now outgrown the facility in Leesport, and the fifth annual Cabin Fever Expo, scheduled for Jan. 27 and 28, will be held in the Lebanon Valley Exposition Center, in Lebanon.

And that's what makes Cabin Fever Expo and other shows like it so valuable. It is something Schoenly understands, and is proud of. Cabin Fever brings people together, to share their common interest in machinery and engineering, and to encourage each other in reaching new levels of skill and excellence.

PUBLIC AUCTION

Valuable Farm Real Estate
SAT., MARCH 3, 2001
@ 1:00 PM

Location: 9 Shuman Road, Newburg, (Hopewell Twp.), Cumberland County, PA

Directions: From Blue Mountain Exchange (PA Turnpike) go East on Route 997 Approx. 3 miles to Auction.

This property is to be offered in three tracts and/or as a whole tract of 87.37 acres more or less. Tract #1 is approx. 25.57 acres with road frontage, and stream. This tract is ideal for a horse farmette, Estate location, etc., good drainage & elevation level to gentle slope. Present usage is cropland.

Tract #2 is approx. 7.4 acres and has a very early log home with siding and new furnace 2 years ago. There is water and septic system. The log home needs renovation and or it could be moved to another site if you so desire. There is also an old cornbarn garage/workshop with some work needed. This tract is situate to the immediate north of Rt. 997 and also has frontage on Shuman Road.

Tract #3 is approx. 54.4 acres and has a bank barn with box stalls, milkhouse, chicken house or workshop, implement pole shed, and a 40' by 80' m/l 1 floor hog, sheep, chicken, or most any farm usage potential. This tract also has approx. 5 acres of woodland and is presently cropland. This would be ideal for an executive estate location and or horse farm. Fields are level to gentle slope to the south.

Terms of Auction: $15,000 down on each tract or $40,000 for entire tract if sold as 1 parcel day of Auction. Down payment MUST BE CERTIFIED FUNDS PAYABLE TO: Sanford G. Leaman, Escrow Acct. Settlement on or before April 10, 2001.

Farmer Boy Conducts Open House

King's Agri Seeds Conducts Forage, Grazing Meeting

GEORGETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — A meeting conducted by King's Agri Seeds, Ronks, last week included several speakers who pointed out the benefits of grass in a profitable dairy ration.

John Thyssen, forage director, Barenbrug USA and others spoke to about 200 dairy producers at the Bart Fire Hall in Georgetown. Producers attending wanted to find out more about the benefits of grass-based systems.

Thyssen pointed out the feed benefits of a grass-based system to meet the ruminant animal's protein and energy needs. Grasses are inexpensive to produce, he said, tolerate many soils, and are healthy for the animal.

Don Schwartz, Washington County, Md. extension agent, pointed out the benefits of using annual ryegrass in a demonstration under droughty, unfavorable grass-growing conditions. The ryegrass produced good yields of high-quality forage under both grazing and haylage harvest systems.

Tim Fritz, Penn State farm management agent, pointed out that some studies, though not so reliable as he would like them to be, pointed out that grazing systems can save upward of $200 per cow versus confinement operations.

Fritz conducted his own Lancaster study of grazing compared to confinement dairy farms during a drought year and found that data he collected pointed out the benefits of grazing compared to confinement in terms of cost per hundredweight of milk. But farms and farm operations differ in many ways, depending on debt load and other factors.

Said Fritz, "Do what is right for you."

Sakata Seed America, Inc. Launches New Website

MORGAN HILL, Calif. — Sakata Seed America, Inc. has announced the official launch of its new Website, www.sakata-.com.

The new Sakata Website features a variety of benefits to customers, including general company information, online vegetable and flower seed catalogs, news and events, distributor contact information with links, frequently asked questions, and seed availability.

The "About Us" section of the Website provides a brief description about Sakata Seed America, Inc. and includes Sakata World Wide information with links to Sakata Seed Corporation in Japan, Sakata Europe, and Sakata Mexico. Visitors to the Website can also view employment opportunities, human resources philosophy, and submit their resumes online.

The new Website features an online catalog where visitors can browse through Sakata's vegetables, oriental vegetables, bedding, cut flower, and vegetative seed varieties. Upon selecting a flower or vegetable seed variety, a description of that variety with cultural details is displayed along with seed availability.

Visitors can also view current news by reviewing current articles, press releases relating to Sakata, and check for upcoming events. The Website also enables users to locate a Sakata distributor in their area and review frequently asked questions.

Fast, Easy, Safe Way To Transport Disc Mower-Conditioner

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Transporting even the widest New Holland Discbine® disc mower-conditioner to the field is safer and easier with the Discbine transporter from New Holland.

The operator simply backs the Discbine® up the loading ramps, locks it in place, then swings and latches the tongue.

The Discbine transporter is designed to transport New Holland's widest disc mower-conditioners, Models 1441 and 1442. Each of these models cuts a wide, 15-foot, 7-inch swath in the field. When loaded on the transporter, the transport width shrinks to a more manageable 9-foot, 6-inches.

The transporter is easy to use. The loading ramps raise automatically. When the header is lowered, the Discbine is automatically secured to the transporter and the Discbine tongue automatically latches to the trailframe for transport. An easy-to-use unlatch pin repositions the tongue to the end-wise transport position.

For safety, the Discbine transporter includes all required brake/flash/turn lights, SMV emblem, and reflective tape for end-wise transport.

Farm Bureau Winners Receive Kubota Tractor

Kubota tractor corporation representative, Tom Burton, presented the Lititz, Lancaster County, couple with one year's use of the Kubota tractor of their choice. They chose a 98 horsepower M120, Kubota's largest tractor, with a cab, 4-wheel drive, bevel gear front axle with bi-speed turn feature, 16 speed powershift transmission, and a loader attachment.

The Siplers picked up their new piece of machinery at Messick Farm Equipment in Elizabethtown. Messick's will provide all of the service and maintenance for the time that the Siplers have the tractor.

Their trip to Orlando, where they competed with other young farm couples from across the nation, and the tractor are prizes for winning the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Young Farmer and Rancher Achievement Award at the organization's annual meeting in November.

"This young farm couple is a wonderful assurance that agriculture in Pennsylvania has a bright future," said PFB President Guy Donaldson. The Siplers expanded their dairy herd, Neverland Brown Swiss, and moved from Berks County to the Lititz area of Lancaster County last summer.

They are currently milking 100 head and have 112 heifers. One-third of the dairy cows are Brown Swiss and the rest are Holsteins. Oscar intends to increase the number of Brown Swiss in the herd and also plans to market the animals which are registered. With a rented farm facility and with all feed inputs being purchased, Oscar is aiming to achieve a one-man operation with maximum efficiency.

Marie works off the farm as an area sales manager for New Holland Credit. However, she helps with the milking in the evening and does genetic selection on weekends for the breeding of the cows.

Even though the farm is rented, Oscar has added some improvements to make it easier and more profitable to operate. They include two large grain bins and a TMR mixer system. Oscar also does all his own artificial insemination work on the herd.

The Siplers are active in farm organizations. Oscar was recently elected to the Lancaster County Farm Bureau Board of Directors. Marie has been involved with the Brown Swiss Junior Association and is a dairy judging coach.

The annual award honors a young farmer or farm couple under age 35 who demonstrate excellent business and leadership abilities.

Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is a non-governmental, voluntary organization representing over 28,000 farm and rural families in Pennsylvania.

Pa. Guild Of Craftsmen Announces Schedule

RICHBORO (Bucks Co.) — Called "One of the Most Prestigious Craft Events" by Discovery Channel's Lynette Jennings, The Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen announces the schedule for its six craft events for 2001.

Each offers its own unique blend of entertainment, education, great food and, of course, the magnificent art and craftwork for which the Guild is famous.

Nationally recognized craftspeople and one-of-a-kind treasures ranging from basketry, clay, fiber, glass, jewelry, leather, metal, paper and wood are a staple at every Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen's show.

Guild members' crafts have been featured in the personal collections of United States Presidents, Richard Simmons, the Museum of Fine Arts Boston and the Wyeth family of artists. They've been featured in Mel Gibson's movie "The Patriot," the Discovery Channel's Lynette Jennings Design, The New York Times, Country Home Magazine, Southern Living, The Smithsonian, and The J. Peterman Catalog.

Following is a list of shows:

- Spring Craft Celebration, Richboro, May 19-20.
- 55th Annual State Craft Fair, Lancaster, July 27-29.
- Pocono Craft Fair, Shawnee-on-the-Delaware, Aug. 25-26.
- Winterthur Craft Festival, Winterthur, Del., Sept. 1-2.
- Fall State Craft Festival, Richboro, Oct. 12-14.
- Holiday Craft Fair, Lancaster, Nov. 24-25.

Vermeer® 830/1030 DiscPro™ Mower Conditioners

We didn't just design another center-pivot mower conditioner.

We Improved It!

Vermeer® 830/1030 DiscPro: These are the mowers that not only cut hay, but also handle the fire ant hills and many of the stray, unexpected obstacles that tend to jam up cutterbars and tear up the works in other machines.

New! DynaGard™ Protection System.
New! Unique Lift Spring Suspension.
New! Low-Profile Cutterbar Design.
New! Modular Conditioning System.

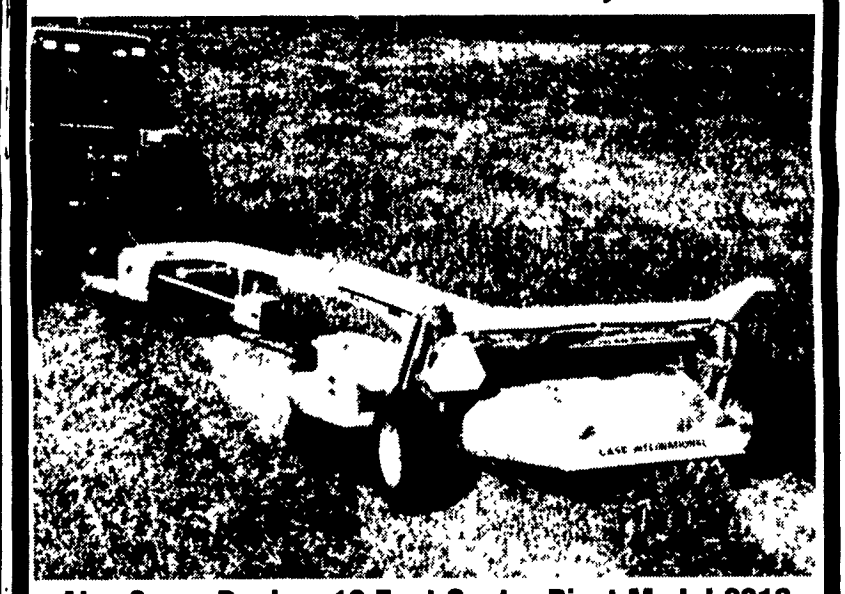
Case IH FAST CUT
High Speed Case IH 8309 Disc Mower Conditioner, 9' Cut



Also Super Deal on 12 Foot Center Pivot Model 8312

The Case International 8309 disc mower conditioner is a fast cutter High speed, heat-treated discs spin at over 180 miles per hour to cut a swath of more than nine feet where a sicklebar machine might plug up

Wet and/or dense hay, tangled grasses or weeds, ant hills and rodent mounds don't faze the 8309. You keep on going for top productivity

Wide, intermeshing rolls gently, yet effectively condition the crop and lay down a wide swath or windrow sized for your harvest equipment In-field adjustments are quick and easy, too

When you need the fast cut of a disc machine, see the Case International 8309

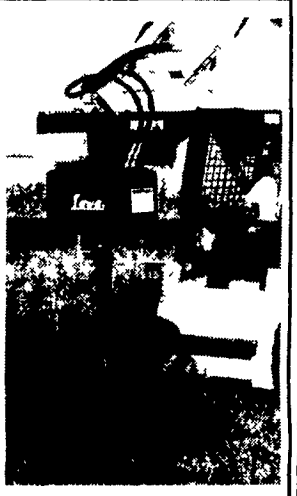
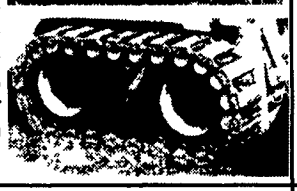
Augers
Hydraulically driven augers provide fast, economical digging With auger bits available from 6-inch to 36-inch diameters, these augers give you the ability to handle a multitude of tasks. Normal digging depth is 48 inches Optional 14- and 24-inch extensions available. A 30-inch tree/shrub auger is also available.

Steel Tracks
For sand, snow or mud, Gehl steel tire tracks get you through the toughest weather and working conditions to get the job done A patented self-cleaning design keeps mud, ice, rocks and other debris from wedging in the tracks





Today's Most Advanced Disc Mower Conditioner

GEHL Model 2365

10' Cut In Stock for Immediate Delivery

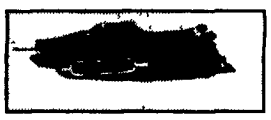
Also Model 2345 9 Foot Cut In Stock

Long hood for less wind turbulence for cleaner cutting in thin crop stands.

A Gehl disc mower conditioner delivers exceptional cutting and conditioning, even in your most difficult crops and conditions.

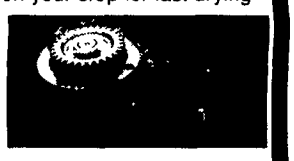
Rugged high-speed cutting discs, spinning at 3,000 rpm, easily slice through down and tangled crops or dense wet undergrowth to deliver a clean cut

The cut crop is delivered to Gehl's specially designed intermeshing rubber conditioning rolls for thorough, yet gentle crop conditioning. They'll condition your crop for fast drying

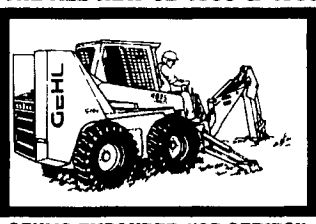


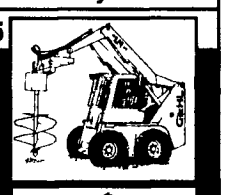
ONLY FROM GEHL
The gear driven cutterbar (outlined in white) is protected. Gehl shields the cutterbar from rocks or other field obstructions with full-width skid shoes

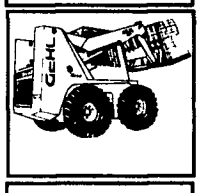
Easily replaceable disc drive assemblies. Drive stations can be removed individually for quick servicing Bearings are sealed in grease The patented Protectadrive™ system protects the cutterbar gear train from damage in the event of disc contact with major field obstacles

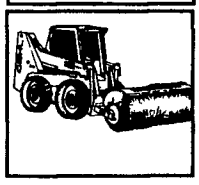


THE ALL-NEW SL 4635 & 4835









GEHL'S EXPANDED "35 SERIES"
Now More Versatile Than Ever!

Gehl's all-new "35 Series" line offers the most advanced design in skid loader history Now with increased lift and unsurpassed visibility, plus more power, they handle a broad range of applications The line includes two new models – the SL 4635 and 4835. Highly maneuverable with exceptional stability, they get the job done in tight confines. Like all "35 Series" skid loaders, they offer built-in features for easy maintenance and user comfort. Reliable and efficient, Gehl will match your skid loader needs.

Power Landscape Rake
The perfect tool for landscape contractors. With a unique rake action, these units collect rocks and surface debris, leaving soil in a loose, level condition. They remove rocks, sticks and metal from the ground surface, leaving you with several inches of loose, relatively debris-free soil. Their unique action will also dethatch tired turf, leaving the surface ready to re-seed.

Krause 7400 Discs...
Engineered for the Way You Farm

Why Should You Choose The New Krause 7400 Rockflex for Your Next Disc?

1 Double Offset Designed Frame
The 7400's strength starts with a rugged 5' x 7' mainframe that comes complete with a three-year warranty. The double offset gang design provides a level-field finish, the "trademark" of a Krause disc.

2 Rockflex Bearing Arms
New, heavier Rockflex bearing arms feature a full 1¼" thick by 2½" wide standard to flex over the toughest obstacles. These bearing arms are heat treated for durability.

3 Heavy-Duty Walking Tandem
Krause's heavy-duty walking tandem system smooths out rough fields, and rough roads when transporting. This feature gives you more precise depth control and more stable discing

4 Self-Leveling Hitch
The self-leveling hitch on the Krause 7400 features an adjustable leveling link for fore to aft leveling changes. Self-leveling mechanism is spring cushioned for protection.

5 Rigid Scrapers .
Five inch wide rigid scrapers are heat treated and hot formed from the same high carbon steel we use in our disc blades The result is an extremely strong and efficient scraper that resists wear.

6 Gang Bearings
Krause SuperSeal regreasable gang bearings are as tough and durable as the discs they come on They are protected in a ductile cast iron holder and encased in a heavy rubber boot to absorb shock

7 Wing Fold Hinges
Massive 1½" x 15' hinge bolts on the Krause 7400 distribute folding forces over a wide area, not concentrating them in a narrow hinge like some competitive designs.

8 Forward Action Wing Wheels
The forward action wing wheels rotate close to the front gangs for precise depth control on the Krause 7400. This design limits the need for optional front gauge wheels that are necessary on other brands.

9 Heavy Cast Spools
The heavy cast spools multiply the strength of the Krause disc gang, making it the strongest in the industry. The design supports the disc blade more positively without creating a "stress line" like competitive designs.

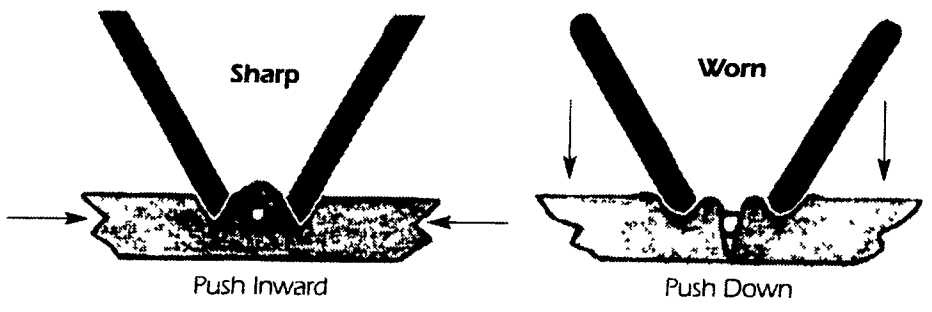
Attention:
Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)



After all, if a field is worth planting, why not do it right?

Benefits include:
✔ Less closing pressure
✔ More uniform germination
✔ Improved stand population
✔ Increased yields

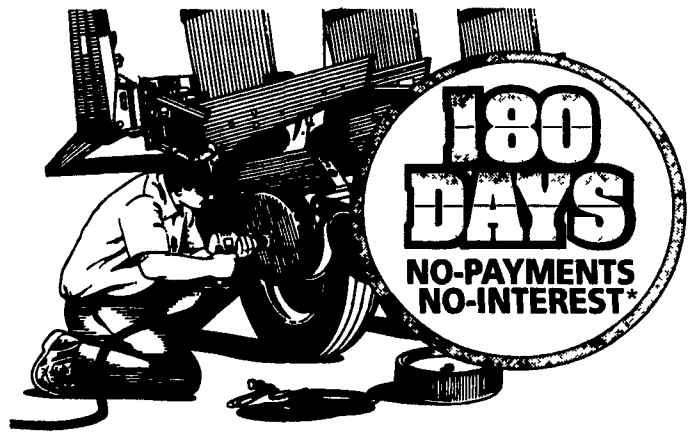
DO IT RIGHT NOW!

Don't take chances with your planting season. A tune-up by the seeding specialist helps make every seed count!

When it's time to put seed in the ground, you'll need all the accuracy and consistency you've come to expect from your planter! So put top performance back into it with an overhaul from the Seeding Specialists at Deer Creek Equipment. Our skilled service professionals will overhaul everything, from seed meters to closing wheels. *Offer applies to Farm Plan Preferred Accounts with approved credit



NO PAYMENTS

NO INTEREST

NO KIDDING

THE TIME IS RIGHT–AND SO IS THE PRICE!

FOLLOWING YOUR METERING UNIT INSPECTION...

You can't get a good yield from your seed if it's not planted correctly. Make sure your planter is working properly with our On Farm Planter Inspection. Our factory-trained service technicians will come to your farm to inspect your planter from the down force springs to the wiring harness. When we're done, we'll give you a complete list of items that need attention or repair. Have Deer Creek do any needed repairs and we'll haul your planter free of charge. Or, we can supply you with all the parts to do it yourself.

Geographic limitations apply, call your Deer Creek Customer Service rep for details

METERING UNIT INSPECTION $15.95 per row unit

Check your drill's seed boot adjustment

DEER CREEK EQUIPMENT MACHINE MAINTENANCE Tip

You don't see the seed boots when you're drilling, but boot position is critical for accurate seed placement. Make sure the seed boot is set according to instructions in the operator's manual or technical manual. The boots are attached at the center hole for most planting conditions, but they can be attached at the top hole to compensate for blade wear, for deep seeding, or to reduce trash buildup. The bottom attachment hole is used for planting in heavy trash conditions, for seeding at depths down to one inch, or when high-speed planting causes inconsistent seed depth. If the boot is too low, the opener may plug or it may not penetrate; it may even wear rapidly. If the boot is too high, the seed may not drop in the bottom of the furrow.

Here's all you really need to remember...

Fast, clean, even...

Nothing gets the job done faster, cleaner, or better than a New Holland Model 3106 side-delivery spreader.

- Handles a wide variety of material – slurry, gutter material, cow manure, even poultry litter.
- Offers the most control for light top dressing through heavy applications.
- Choose from five capacities ranging from 1,005 gallons up to 3,188 gallons with side rails in place.
- Each model backed by a 10-year warranty against tank rust-through.

See us for all your spreader needs.

Farmers Union Pleased Clean Air Waiver Not Granted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Farmers Union (NFU) praised the decision of outgoing President Bill Clinton to not grant a waiver to California from clean air standards that require oxygenate, such as ethanol, in gasoline.

NFU also reaffirmed its strong support of the establishment of a National Renewable Fuels Standard, a policy that helps farmers and protects the environment.

"We are pleased that the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) did not approve the waiver request for California," said NFU President Leland Swenson. "This action helps our country optimize the increasingly important biofuel market that promises to provide a renewable fuel solution that promotes clean air, clean water and decreased dependence on volatile fuel markets. The environmental and energy concerns that face Californians and the entire country, again, demonstrate the need for swift action to pass legislation that will help farmers and establish a National Renewable Fuels Standard."

National Farmers Union has worked hard in support of responsible legislative solutions in the wake of the banning of the oxygenate methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE), which currently used in California. The family farmer and rancher organization was a main proponent of S. 2962, sponsored by Sens. Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Richard Lugar, R-Ind., which establishes a National Renewable Fuels Standard that would triple the demand for ethanol over the next 10 years. NFU continues to advocate the creation of a Strategic Renewable Energy Reserve that would establish on-farm storage of a year's worth of feedstock and bio-mass to ensure consistent supplies for the production of ethanol and other biofuels. The administration's decision follows a Jan. 2 letter to EPA, issued by several groups including Farmers Union, urging the waiver not be granted.

In places where MTBE is added to gasoline, the additive has come under scrutiny due to its propensity to cause ground water contamination. Substituting oxygenates such as ethanol or other biofuels made from commodities produced on America's farms provides an environmentally safe and sustainable alternative to MTBE and would greatly expand the market for corn and other agricultural products as well as increase prices paid to farmers.

"New farmer-owned ethanol facilities are being built every day," said Swenson. Farmers are ready to provide the necessary commodities to meet increasing demand. We need to move forward with the promotion of a nationwide, comprehensive policy that ensures clean air, enhances energy security, and benefits America's farmers."

New York Farm Show — 16 Years And Going Strong

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — See it — Feb. 22-24 — Thursday through Saturday at the 16th Annual New York Farm Show.

More than 400 agribusinesses, gathered in five buildings at the New York State Fairgrounds between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily, offer the unbelievable opportunity to check out the latest and best farm equipment, technology, inputs, and services...just in time for spring planting.

"We at New York Farm Show care about this state's number one industry — agriculture," said Scott Grigor, New York Farm Show manager. "Farmers who want to keep up on the latest piece of equipment, tillage management, or whatever their farm operation needs can find it at the New York Farm Show. This is our 16th year and we are going strong to service the farmers' needs."

While you explore modern ag technology, your children between the ages of 4-13 can learn about farm safety. In a special Farm Safety Days for Kids program, conducted by the New York Center for Agriculture Medicine and Health (NYCAMH) on Thursday, Feb. 22, children ages 8-13 will learn about animal safety, small equipment safety, chemical safety, and first on the scene-/first aid.

Children between the ages of 4-7 can view a farm safety puppet show, identify hazards on a toy farm, and color posters and place mats in an art area.

New York Farm Show sponsors its 10th annual Toy Show Auction Friday, Feb. 23, at 6 p.m. in the Empire Room of the Arts and Homes Building. More than 250 pieces will be auctioned, with proceeds going to benefit New York FFA.

New York Farm Show is sponsored by the Northeast Equipment Dealers Association and "American Agriculturist" magazine. Tickets are available free from Northeast Equipment Dealers or by writing New York Farm Show, P.O. Box 3470, Syracuse, NY 13220. Include a self-addressed stamped legal envelope with your request.

Extension Educator Receives National Award

NEWARK, Del. — Jo Mercer, cooperative extension educator for horticulture at the University of Delaware (UD) was presented the Outstanding Service Award by the Association of Specialty Cut Flower Growers (ASCFG) at its national conference in Austin, Texas.

She was honored for her efforts to develop the ASCFG e-mail discussion group, which enables members to share cultural and marketing experiences as well as recommendations.

Many ASCFG members consider the discussion group to be the "most valuable service the association offers."

Mercer works with volunteers, individuals, and businesses involved in activities related to horticulture. A doctoral candidate in educational technology at UD, Mercer has an interest in how the Internet and multimedia applications can further adult education. She also developed and maintains the New Castle County Extension Website.

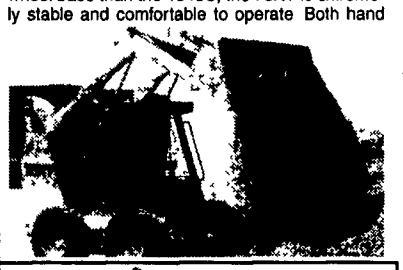
New 75XT Lift and Carry Skid Steer

The 75XT, with its extremely stable and maneuverable wheel base and power reach lift design is the perfect machine for virtually any lift and carry application The 75XT features 2200 pounds of operating load for handling heavy loads in agricultural, landscaping and general construction applications. Large square bales and silage bales are easily handled by the 75XT With 10% greater wheel base than the 1845C, the 75XT is extremely stable and comfortable to operate Both hand control and foot control-options are available to match operator preference The field proven, reliable Case 4-390 engine, rated at 60 Horsepower, provides low cost of operation Coupler attachment pickup specifications are the same as the 1845C, so buckets, brooms, augers, bale spikes, auto rakes, snow blades, and scrap grapples can be used Other attachments, such as pallet forks, must be matched to the increased lift capacity of the 75XT

The 75XT is a perfect skid steer for a wide variety of applications in the rapidly expanding lift and carry market It sets new standards in power and lift capacity with added value and more performance for the investment

(The loader with more reach).



Hydraulic Hammer
Provides high-impact forces for breaking concrete, rock, pavement and other demolition projects Tools are available to cut, drive posts and sheetings. Rentals Available

The All Purpose Spreader

Everlast Roofing, Inc.

Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"

1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks
7.
NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1. One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention
2. Primer coat. promotes outstanding top coat adhesion.
3. Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider.
4. G-100 Galvanized. Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint. G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels
5. Full Hard. Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc
6. Heat formed. Metal is painted before ribs are formed. Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks. (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)
7. Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L.F.
8. Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53.37 Per Square. $1 69 Per L.F.

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$46.74 PER SQUARE

MECHANICALLY DRIED ALFALFA HAY CUBES
We grow our own alfalfa under irrigation in the fertile soil of Maryland's Eastern Shore, where it's harvested almost immediately after cutting. While nutrient levels are still high and the leaves are still supple and green. The crop is then dried mechanically, and cubed. Delivered to Lancaster & Chester Counties for $130 00 Ton.

Attention
Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers!
New Products Now Available...
With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP
This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40
An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorbtions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL
A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program
As manufacturers and distributers of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products

153 ACRE DAUPHIN COUNTY FARM

This farm is ideally located at the base of a mountain range in Northern Dauphin County, (Lykens Valley), near Millersburg. The buildings are set several hundred yards off the main road, creating that perfect Currier & Ives setting everyone dreams about with the mountain as a back drop. The buildings feature a very well maintained brick center hall farm house with 4 large bedrooms and a large country kitchen The out buildings consist of a 38x40 Bank Barn, 25x42 heated shop and 60x120 Morton pole building used for equipment storage. The majority of 100 tillable acres is gently rolling productive farm land with approximately 12 acres of pasture and 41 acres of woodland. This farm would be ideal for vegetable production with it's fertile crop land and abundant water supply for irrigation or it would make a perfect country estate, with it's beautiful setting and buildings.

TOP HERD In Pennsylvania Feeds

PURINA ULTIMATE EXT

When you think of a barn-full of beautiful, high producing, mature cows with the top protein herd average in Pennsylvania, you stop at Friend-Lea Farm in Cambria County. Located in the rolling productive countryside east of Ebensburg, Jim and Adena Harteis and their children Mike, Lindsey, John, and Luke have worked the family farm starting in 1968. Their concentrated effort to develop long-lasting cows comes from a family philosophy of several generations ago that concludes you need "old cows and young chickens" to make money farming.

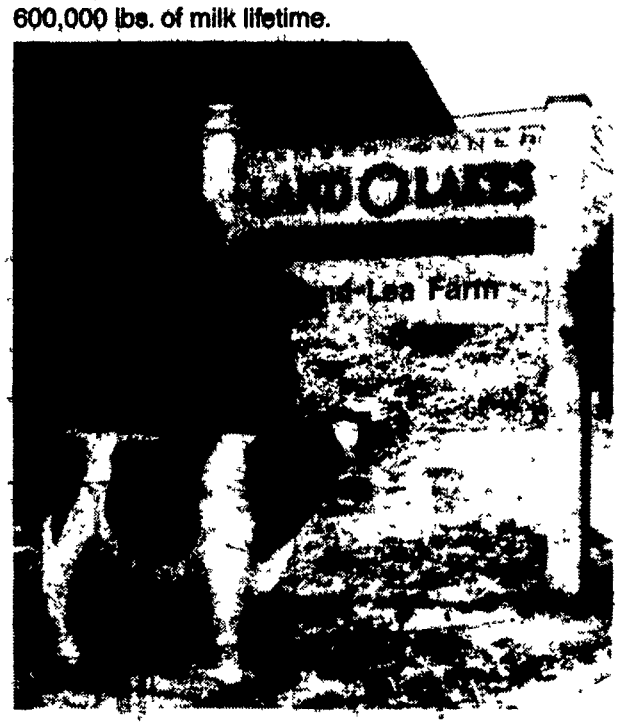
Of course, there are no chickens here, but there are mature cows, lots of them. Of the 90-plus head in the milking string, one-third have produced 100,000 lbs. milk lifetime. And five cows have produced over a million pounds of milk. The trend to breed "disposable cows" that stay in the herd only one or two years has no place here.

"When you expect your cows to stay around a long time, you manage your herd so they do," Harteis said. "You take care of the basics right now, whenever you see a problem. Hoof trimming, water supply, reproductive program, dry cow conditioning, vaccination, and a good feeding program–these things all contribute to a successful herd. When I first started farming we didn't have the extensive and good technical assistance available that we have now. I just need to get the right professional assistance integrated into our herd and farming operation."

Much of the herd traces to one cow purchased at the 1986 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention Sale. Walebe Bell Jessica, VG, has lifetime credits of 179,000 lbs. of milk and her four daughters in the herd have produced a combined total of more than 1 million pounds of milk. The top cow in the herd produced 232.6 lbs. per day, and individual records include 47,000 lb. lactations on top of the 47,000 lb. lactations. Generation after generation have these long-life production credits too.

Harteis puts his management style into a simple formula–GNC. GNC=Genetics, Nutrition, and Care. The genetics comes from using bulls that have 90-plus repeatability and the care comes from doing the little things immediately. The nutrition comes from Purina feeds.

"A lot of our success here must be given to Purina feeds," Harteis said. "I tend to turn the feeding program over to whomever I work with. I say 'the feed room is yours, if you do a good job." And since 1995, Purina has had the feed room at Friend-Lea. Along with home grown corn silage, haylage, dry hay, and high moisture corn, a TMR ration is balanced with 38% concentrate and high producing cows top dressed with Ultimate EXT. Harteis adds additional levels of vitamins and minerals. The Purina dry cow program is especially liked by Harteis. "I think their Prepare 50 dry cow program is especially good. The fresh cows come in ready to go."



It's hard to argue with success. One cow in the herd will go over 400,000 lbs. milk lifetime with her present lactation. And all five of the cows that have produced more than a million pounds are bred back and milking more than 100 lbs. per day. That's why Purina continues to own the feed room at Friend-Lea Farm.

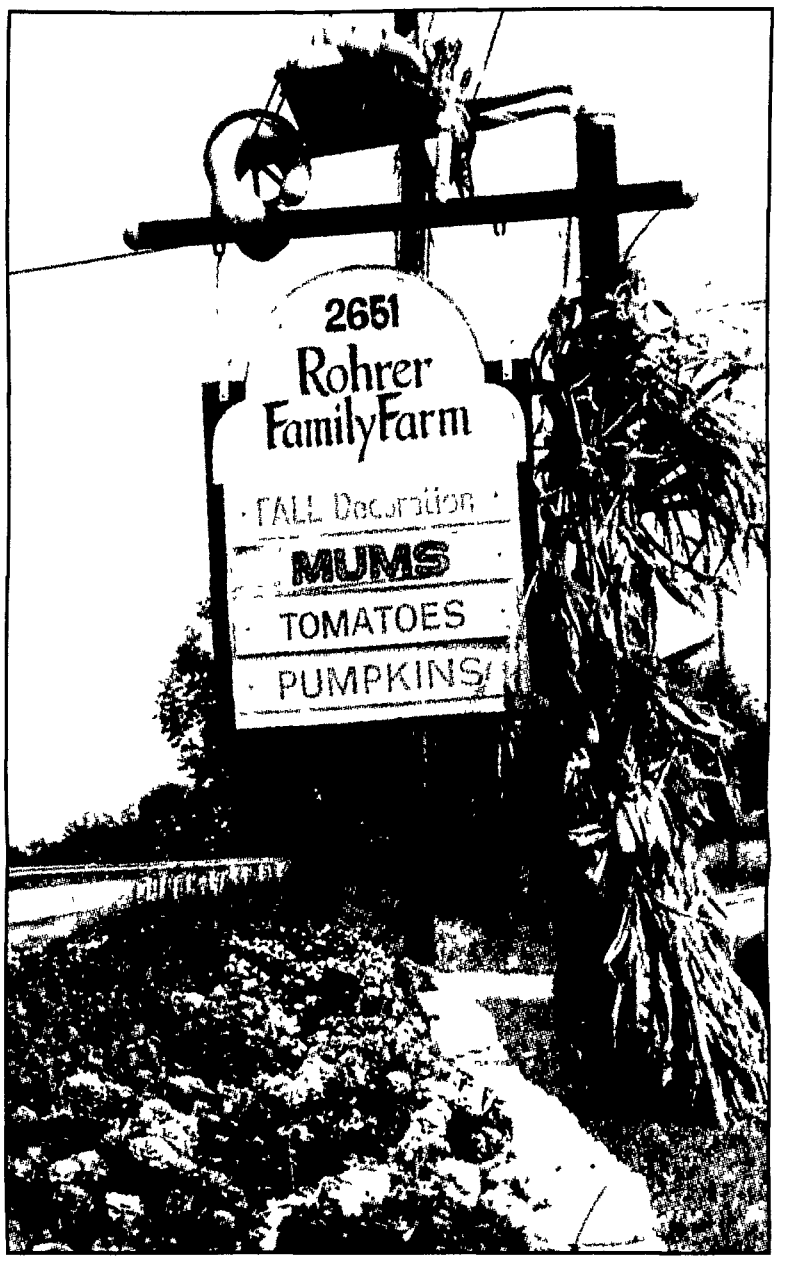
Rohrers Find Niche In Flower Farming, Produce Production



During autumn the harvest can be found . . . on the front door. Above, Rose Rohrer shows one of the the corn tassel and corn leaf wreaths, just a few of the variety of wreaths offered at the stand.

"We make wreaths out of anything I can think of," said Rose, who also custom-makes the wreaths according to the color and design of the buyer. "In the fall there is less produce, and this is something else we can offer."

At right a sign and potted plants make an eye-catching display along the road for passers-by.

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Combine fresh produce, faithful customers, artful arrangements, a highly-trafficked road, fresh flowers, and a marketing strategy, and get . . . a budding business.

Nelson and Rose Rohrer are the fourth generation on Nelson's home farm. The Rohrers operated for 25 years on the farm, then took the reins for the last 13 on their own.

Last year they rented out the farm's grain storage and drying business to devote their efforts to the stand.

Springtime finds the Rohrers selling beddings plants, strawberries, and raspberries, besides early-blooming flowers. Although sweet corn is king of summer sales, watermelon, cantaloupes, tomatoes, and green beans also account for produce sales.

Fall decorations such as corn shocks, Indian corn, pumpkins, gourds and dried flowers decorate both the tent and customer's homes.

At the stand, which is open six days a week, the Rohrers employ one helper full time in the tent and another full time with fieldwork. In the HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — As the new millennium truly gets under way in 2001, fruit and vegetable growers need the latest information on growing techniques, pest control, nutrition, marketing, and business management.

There is no better place for growers in the Mid-Atlantic region to learn the latest in "Growing in the New Millennium" than at the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey Jan. 30-Feb. 1.

About 2,000 people, mostly fruit and vegetable growers from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and other states are expected to gather at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center for the convention. The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticulture Society.

This year the fruit growers will be joined by peach growers from across the nation as the National Peach Council will conduct its

POSSIBILITIES FOR DIRECT MARKETING

Low prices for many of the agricultural commodities normally produced here in Lancaster County have forced many farmers to seek alternative sources of income. One alternative that many choose is to begin growing vegetables.

While the potential exists for this to be a viable source of income, the increasing number of growers producing vegetables may begin to depress prices, at least in our local area. The auctions can only move so much produce both because of a limited number of buyers as well as being unable to physically deal with large volumes of produce.

Large amounts of produce mean lower prices, appealing to buyers but not good for the grower trying to increase farm income. In order to help this situation, growers need to direct market as much of their produce as possible.

The greater returns from direct marketing (compared to wholesaling) may be the key to helping a farm survive through periods of low prices. A major drawback to direct marketing is that it requires more time and effort from a grower. It also requires more "people skills" or the ability to negotiate with people and

"sell" your produce.

While direct marketing is not for everyone, I still encourage established and especially new growers to seek ways to direct market at least a portion of your crops. One major advantage we have here in Lancaster County is that the large population necessary for direct marketing is here or nearby. We have a large number of tourists that visit during the growing season as well as the nearby cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and even New York and Washington.

One popular method of direct marketing already common in the county is roadside stands. In the summer, Lancaster County roadways are dotted with stands offering the high quality produce grown here. Unfortunately, I believe we are nearing the saturation point in terms of the number of stands we have.

When too many stands are present in one area, the possibility of a "price war" increases. One stand owner will reduce his/her prices in order to draw business away from the competition. Other stands reduce their prices to remain competitive. More often than not, reducing prices only leads to lower profits for all growers involved.

It is especially disturbing to me to see "hobby" farmers selling produce at a roadside stand at artificially low prices. These "growers" often have little concept of the true costs of production for their crops. They only see the income from their crops as "extra" money. Generally these entrepreneurs have full-time jobs elsewhere. This is a difficult or even impossible situation to change and is often harmful to full-time growers.

Another direct marketing option is selling at a farmer's market. In my opinion, this method of sales presents a real opportunity for growers in the county. Lancaster City is a prime area to start a farmer's market perhaps in the parking lot of one of the larger retail shopping centers. A major advantage of a farmer's market is that many customers are coming to one place. A large number of people purchasing a small amount of produce can quickly add up to a large quantity of produce in a short period of time. The need for a large amount of produce can actually be a disadvantage if you cannot supply customer demand!

By locating the farmer's market close to or in the city, a new group of people can visit and buy produce. These people are probably not frequenting a roadside stand because of the inconvenience of driving "out to the country" and thus a farmer's market only increase the volume of produce we could see within the county.

One problem with marketing through a farmer's market is the amount of time involved. Preparation time, travel time, and time spent at the market all represent a grower's time away from the farm. Booth fees and the additional labor necessary to run a stand are also added expenses. Produce must be sold at a fair and reasonable price in order to justify these costs.

But the extra quality that your produce will have over items trucked in from distant fields, along with a little "salesmanship," should assist in selling at the necessary price.

If you plan to start selling at an established market, do some research and find out what items are not currently being sold there. Then produce these items to increase your chances of success. While the highest-quality produce of any type will almost always sell, you will need time to develop a reputation for quality before you can successfully compete with established vendors.

Other possible alternative marketing options include Community Supported Agriculture (CSA), U-pick, restaurants, small grocers/health food stores, and cooperatives.

More CSAs are appearing in the region each year. These operations tend to be organic, at least in this area. An advantage of running a CSA is that you receive operating money in the beginning of the season from subscribers. Disadvantages include the need for strong people skills, consistent crop production, determining a fair price, and actually finding subscribers. I strongly recommend you research this marketing method thoroughly before you consider starting a CSA.

U-pick operations were very popular in the 1970s but public interest has dropped significantly since that time. I believe there is some limited opportunity for this method of marketing here in Lancaster County. I would not start a strawberry or tree fruit U-pick operation in Lancaster since we have adequate numbers of these operations already in place. But there may be possibilities with other types of small fruit such as blueberries.

Whatever crop you would grow would be planted in rather small acreage. Unfortunately, most people today do not take the time to can, freeze, or make jam so sales will be limited. But if you find the right crop, you can possibly add a profitable component to your farming operation. This would be another marketing method I would thoroughly research before starting. There are special considerations in this operation such as additional insurance and "traffic" control that need to be addressed in order to be successful.

Selling to restaurants and small grocers or health food stores are limited but still potentially viable options in this area. A grower marketing to these operations will almost definitely be traveling to a nearby large city. While the prices received may not be as high as when directly selling to the public, you can still receive greater than wholesale returns. This is especially true if you are selling to an upscale restaurant.

If you choose to market your produce this way, you will need to be committed to producing an extremely high quality product in predictable quantities. Strong people skills will also be necessary for success with this marketing method.

The final option for marketing, while not truly direct marketing, is the formation of a grower cooperative for Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.

The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.

marketing of specific crops. Lancaster County has not had much luck with grower cooperatives in the past. From what I can gather, this has been the result of a lack of commitment from involved growers. I believe there is opportunity here for the production and marketing of specific crops. I believe Lancaster County could produce a large volume of pumpkins — maybe even become a regional production center. We have the soils and climate necessary (most years there is adequate rainfall) to produce excellent pumpkins. But in order for this crop to remain profitable, we need to sell the increased pumpkins grown directly out of the county. A grower cooperative could provide this marketing ability.

Another crop we could produce more of is sweet corn, but again it would need to be produced for markets we are not currently serving.

Growing produce can and should remain a profitable occupation in Lancaster County. But increasing numbers of producers will put pressure on prices.

Both new and established growers should be constantly evaluating their marketing methods to seek alternatives and/or improvements. In order to remain competitive and profitable in this changing environment, you will need to adapt your marketing strategies. I'm confident that Lancaster County growers are up to the task.

Could Spray-On Plastic Mulches Be Possible?

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Someday, instead of laying long rows of plastic mulch from rolls, a producer may simply spray the mulch down, insert the transplant, and when harvest is done, cultivate the material directly into the soil.

Scientists are working on the chemical makeup of the polymers to be used, with extrusion techniques, to come up with improved biodegradable mulches, according to Pasquale Mormile of the National Research Council, Arco Felice, Italy.

The technology, once refined, may allow producers to avoid the costly and possibly environmentally damaging aspects of landfilling the mulches.

Mormile spoke at the end of September during the 15th International Congress For Plastics In Agriculture at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey.

It's a viable alternative, especially when dirty mulch is not as enticing to try to recycle.

Mormile, a polymer chemist, has been looking at various biodegradable polymers the past 10 years, trying to come up with some that are low priced and that can completely degrade.

The idea, noted Mormile, is to bridge polyvinylalcohol (PVA) chains through polycaprolactone (PCL) cross-links. In essence, according to the conference proceedings, PVA can stand on the ground for the time needed for mulching to occur, and the PCL cross-links, being sensitive to slow fungal attack, will undergo cleavage, followed by the complete bioassimilation of the residual PVA chains.

The "time" of biodegradation can be controlled by the number of cross-links introduced, according to the conference proceedings.

What scientists need to do is learn how to tailor a certain combination of the polymers depending on usage, whether it is in open field or under tunnels or in summer or winter climates, according to the proceedings.

But the new mulches must also provide the soil heating and sterilization characteristics of the common polyolefins and polyethylene, or polyvinylchloride, types used today.

Peak season for the Rohrers is July and August, otherwise known as sweet corn season. The Rohrers retail 18 acres of sweet corn at their stand and pick 11-400 dozen a day during the busy time.

Besides their three acres of flowers, 15-20 acres of sweet corn, and the current harvest of three acres of pumpkins, the Rohrers rent out an additional 170 acres for corn and soybean production.

"We are gearing our products more toward our stand," said Rose. She said the couple realized that with the workload the stand demands, Nelson had to devote more time to the stand.

"He had been doing both (farming and the stand) simultaneously, but we needed him to get more involved in the produce stand," she said.

The four children have "flown," according to Rose, "which has changed things a little," although they still return home to help out on weekends.

Although the produce sold is supplemented occasionally to keep up with demand, 99 percent of what the Rohrers sell is grown on their land. "We take responsibility for things if the customer's unhappy," said Rose.

"That reinforces the fact that we stand behind what we sell because it's grown here."

The fifth generation of Rohrers is actually a large contributor to the Rohrer's stand. Amy, 24, Beth, 23, Kate, 23, and Andy, 21, began selling produce at the road as children.

When the Rohrer children were about eight years old, they began to sell produce by their road. "I always sent them out in pairs," said Rose.

Suzanne Ganse, Lancaster, a part-time employee, arranges flowers in pint-sized pumpkins to sell at the stand.

Nelson Rohrer stands with a a hot-selling part of the harvest, one of the farm's pumpkins. During the fall, pumpkins are cut, put in windrows, and packed in bulk bins.

The stand has been a part of the Oregon Pike landscape for years, because Nelson's parents had occasionally sold some of their produce at the roadside edge of the property.

The Rohrers have been at the same location off the road for five years. With the addition of a parking lot for easy access from the road, a brightly-colored tent, and now a small shed, the stand is now easily accessible and recognizable to both tourists and Lancaster residents.

Building Business With Blooms

Fresh flowers have been a drawing card for the Rohrer stand. Besides make-your-own arrangements, flowers are put together for "grab-and-go" bouquets. Prices range from $4 to $6 per bouquet.

"We also take orders," said Rose. Their customers can custom-order a wreath to match the colors of their living room or front door.

Flowers have helped to lengthened the season for the Rohrers. To fill the demand for early spring flowers such as tulips and daffodils, the shed, introduced this year, provided shelter and allowed the Rohrers to open for business before Easter.

The Rohrers planted 7,000-8,000 tulip bulbs, which are sold as cut flowers. They plan to move back into shed for Christmas wreaths and other arrangements for almost year-round sales.

"We're always changing and trying something new and interesting for customers to come an see what's inside," said Rose, who fixed up the inside of the shed to "look like a little house."

Rose's natural-looking bouquets have found their way not only to doorways or kitchen tables but also churches and reception halls.

"We got into weddings," said Rose. "I had no idea that I was going to get into that at the beginning. Someone had faith to let me do one, then I got a little braver, then I did my own daughter's wedding and I had a few pictures to show. Now I'm booking for a year from now."

Rose provides not only the church and reception hall decorations but also the bouquets, boutonnieres, and corsages.

"We don't buy flowers in," she said. "We try to grow a variety and try to keep up on what new things are, or what has a long vase life.

"A lot of our people don't have gardens," Rose said. "Yet they still like something fresh on their table."

During fall, the Rohrer's harvest can also be found on the front doors of area residents. Corn tassel and corn leaf wreaths are just a few of the variety of wreaths offered at the stand.

"We make wreathes out of anything I can think of," said Rose, who also custom-makes the wreaths according to the color and design of her customers' choices. "This time of year there is less produce and this is something else we can offer."

Corn tassel and corn leaf wreaths join colorful flower arrangements nestled in small pumpkins, examples of the combination of the gourds, Indian corn, corn shocks, and dried flowers sold in various ways at the stand.

Marketing And Educating

Besides Rose's local clientele, out-of-town visitors also frequent the Rohrer stand. Although many of them stop in to ask directions, jars of honey and jams often find their way home with the visitors. "Some of them are visiting family or are on their way home," she said.

"We also have the faithful customers that come every week. We've developed a lot of friendships, which is really special," Rose said.

Faithful customers are also visitors to the stand.

"Those are the people that have stuck with us for years, who started when the kids were doing it, and now ask how the kids are doing," she said.

Future special events have been a topic of discussion for the Rohrers. With four acres of pumpkins, the Rohrers are eager to do fall promotion, which centers on the patch.

"We would have to do something different. We thought about an all-you-can-carry event," said Rose. "You always need to be creative."

The stand has proven to be not only a venue for sales but also education, one of the Rohrer's goals for their operation.

"We want people to understand a little about farming," said Rose. "We like to have small school groups to get their questions, because the questions are the best part, lots of interaction."

Rose is a firm believer in interaction with not only schoolchildren but also their customers, a belief that is quickly evident as she greets each customer that enters the tent.

"A lot of our people moved into the area from outside and we like to orient our folks to a variety of things," said Rose. This means educating customers about the different strains of produce or flowers.

"We like to tell them why they're getting what they're getting. It's all one-on-one. That's the best way to teach them, to engage them in conversation. It's good marketing. We're honest and say this is not our favorite, or show them varieties that are juicier or more flavorful so they're not surprised."

The Rohrers also make sure their employees have tasted the produce they are selling so they can say they've tried the varieties, said Rose.

Devon Santos helps his aunt, Sonia Santiago, pick out a bouquet from the make-your-own-arrangment buckets. Both are from Lancaster city.

Carving A Niche

Competition is close by to the Rohrer homestead, so the family put their knowledge of marketing into action. "We had to come up with something unique, a niche," said Rose. Fresh flowers seem to fill the role for the Rohrers, as they have proven to be a draw for customers.

To other entrepreneurs, Rose advises "checking out the market. We had a customer base going by the time of the big investment in the tent. We will be moving into the barn the next few years, which is a bigger investment, and I hope to have a bigger customer base to go with me," she said. "Do things in stages."

Rose also advises, "do a few things and do them well. We found we just can't raise everything and do it well. Nelson found what he's good at, and what the soil is adapted to."

The produce business comes naturally to Nelson. "I grew up working with produce and find it very enjoyable," he said.

Another aspect of the produce business, the flowers, is growing on him, however.

"My mother was an avid flower-grower," said Nelson, who is excited about the increase in the flower business. "It's always nice to sell people something they enjoy.

"Flower production is more intense than produce," he said. "The margin of error is a lot less. You get one bloom a year. If the insects get it that product is lost for the year, so you need to be vigilant. We plant sweet corn every 10 days up until July from March, so there's constantly new sweet corn coming on," said Nelson.

"It's a lot of everyday management to keep it operating at the level we want to work at," said Nelson.

"We're trying to gear our production toward our retail. We don't have time to run to the auction," he said.

"We have a very unique market here for people with a disposable income. You can't do what we do here everywhere. These customers have an interest in buying flowers. Fresh flowers are becoming more of a common thing in households and they're becoming more available to consumers. Statistics show that we're behind Europe in appreciation of fresh flowers and we're trying to change that," said Nelson.

"It's sort of something we started but you never know where you're going to end up, you just try it. If it works it works, if not, try something else."

Find what the clientele likes, said Nelson. "You've got to be a business person today, there's no two ways about it," he said.

"You have to figure out what your market is and then try to meet that. We have always provided quality. I think that's very important," he said.

Nelson noted the family once farmed farm about 400 acres. "Now we farm 30 acres and we're working harder than ever," he said. "We're working flat-out all summer. We finish with the Halloween season and get re-geared for after Thanksgiving to one week before Christmas, then the January shows. There's not much downtime."

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with more than 130 exhibitors. The Trade Show is again expected to be completely sold out.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention. The following sessions are planned for the first day: tree fruits (including light relations, varieties, postharvest handling and insect control topics); season extension technology; back to basics; labor management; promising vegetable crops; leafy greens and herbs; wholesale marketing; greenhouse vegetables; sweet corn; organic production; potatoes; and wine grapes.

On the second day, sessions will cover tree fruit, peaches (including plum pox virus topics), roadside marketing, irrigation, general vegetables, bedding plants/perennials, potatoes, alternative markets, small fruit, snap beans, and computer use.

The convention will close on the third day with sessions on peaches (including varieties, handling and fertigation topics); family business management; pumpkins; melons/cukes/squash; tomatoes (processing and stake); small fruit; cut flowers; fall ornamentals; and marketing.

Besides the opportunity to attend the sessions of the National Peach Council, growers will have the option to attend two half-day workshop sessions. On the first day, Norine Larson from Minnesota will present a workshop on "Managing Teen and Senior Workers." On the last day, Dr. Cindy Iannarelli of Bridgeville, will present a morning workshop on "Keeping Your Family Business Peaceful and Profitable."

There is no extra fee for the workshops. In addition, sessions on computer use will be offered on the second day of the convention.

Many pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, and berry production. Commercial growers should not pass up this great educational opportunity.

On the first evening, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment by the United Voices of Praise from Messiah College. On Jan. 31, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will each sponsor receptions for growers. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2000 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon on the closing day, Feb. 1.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184; William Tietjen, New Jersey State Horticultural Society (908) 475-6505; or Robert Black, Maryland State Horticultural Society (301) 271-7491.

For more information on the vegetable, potato, or bedding plant program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) and the trade show. Registration either through the mail or at the door is required to attend both the trade show and educational sessions.

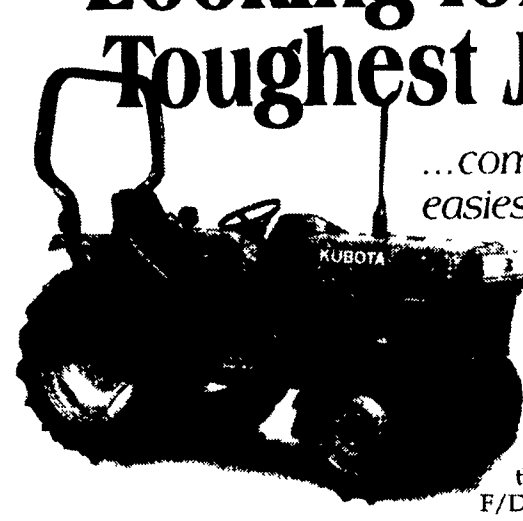
Looking for the Toughest Jobs ...comes with the easiest price tag



Hard-working and extremely versatile, the Kubota L2600 F/DT (22.5 PTO HP) and L3000 F/DT (27.5 PTO HP) compact tractors are powered by Kubota's unique E-TVCS diesel engine and designed for simplistic operation.

Built to handle everything from small farm chores to commercial landscaping, both models come with a redesigned operator platform, conveniently located shift lever and a larger fuel tank for longer hours of productive operation. A live-continuous running PTO is available on the L3000 F and DT models.

Powerful enough to handle heavy loads, both the L2600 F/DT and L3000 F/DT come with Kubota's sliding gear constant mesh transmission – 8F/2R. Wet disc brakes and a Category I, 3-point hitch are standard.

Attach a front loader, backhoe, rear-mount mower, rotary tiller or snowblower and these compact tractors are ready to work

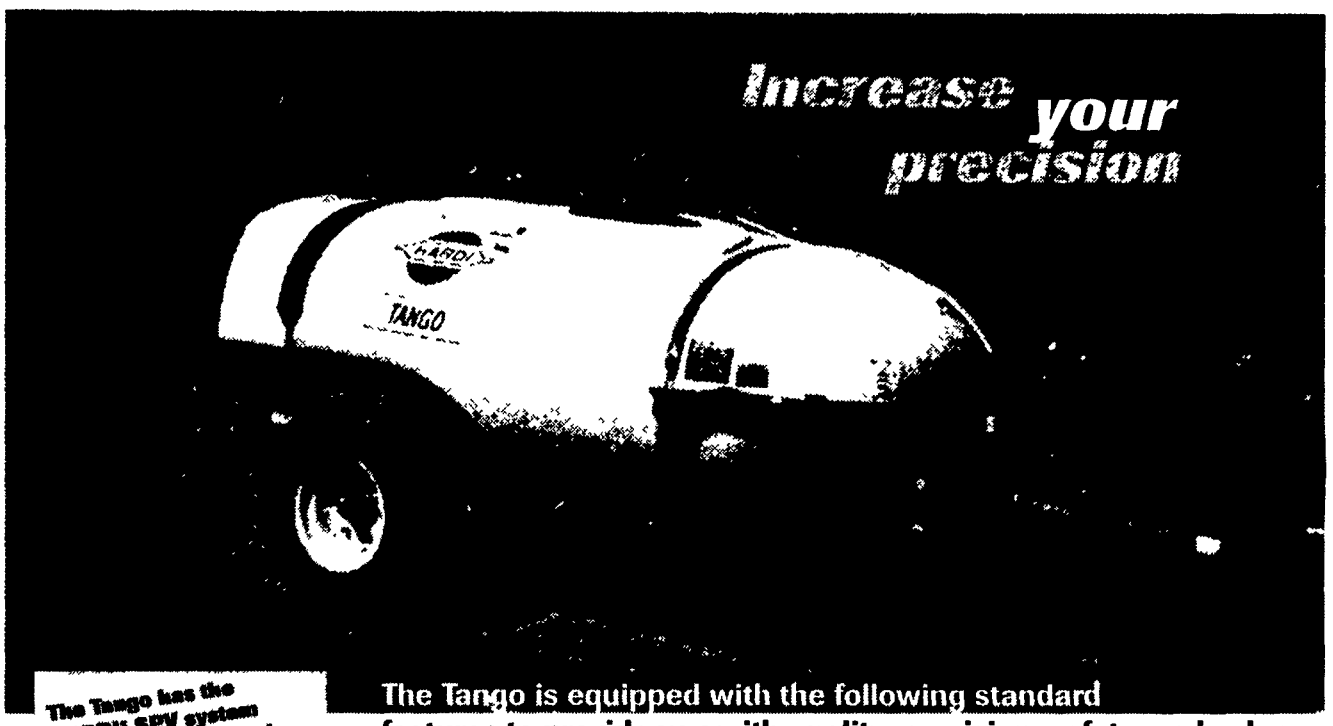
Tango SPV Trailer Mistblower



The Tango has the HARDI® SPV system with 10 equally sized spouts to direct air and spray precisely to the target. The HARDI® SPV system offers more flexibility than any other system on the market today for accurate application ranging from 15-100 GPA.

The Tango is equipped with the following standard features to provide you with quality, precision, safety, and value:

- HARDI® diaphragm pumps offer reliability and ease of maintenance
- Motorized remote controlled electric valves with HARDI®-MATIC and constant pressure selection valves providing mechanical rate control
- Self cleaning filter prevents nozzle plugging
- HARDI® color coded manifold system provides easy access to all operating valves
- 270 and 500 gallon tank sizes with 10 year tank limited warranty
- Dry remote sight gauge
- Powder mixer
- Adjustable wheel tread
- PTO driven 16" centrifugal blower
- Gear box with neutral position for agitation, calibration, and handgun use
- Color coded ceramic non-drip nozzles
- Flush tank and rinse nozzles make clean-up easy
- Lift mount SPV sprayers (with different standard specifications) are also available

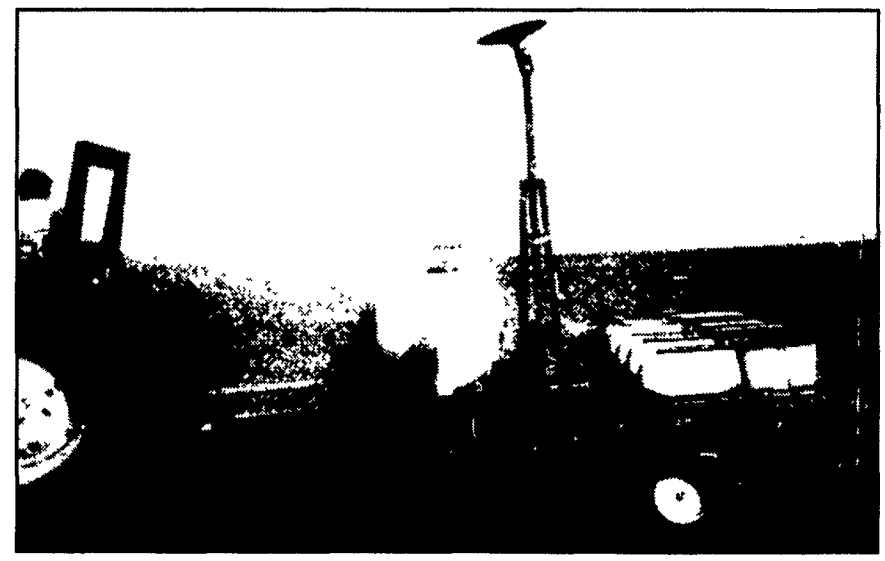
MONOSEM THE PRECISION VACUUM PLANTER

When precision planting counts!...

You take every step possible to ensure that your farming operation is a success Binkley & Hurst, Inc. is dedicated to bringing you the latest in planting technology, with unmatched accuracy and precision. Enjoy the ease of machine operation, significantly higher yields, and dependability you can count on.

Visit Binkley & Hurst Bros soon to experience the advantages of precision vacuum planting with a Monosem NG Plus series vacuum planter

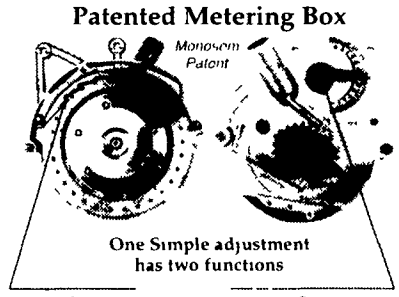
- 2 to 12 Rows
- 3 pt hitch on pull-type
- Liquid or dry fertilizer
- No till or conservation till



* Heavy-duty frame with 7"x7" heavy wall steel tubing
* Spring-loaded contact drive wheels eliminate mechanical clutches.
* Ideal for regular field crops PLUS specialty crops.

NG PLUS SERIES METERING SYSTEM

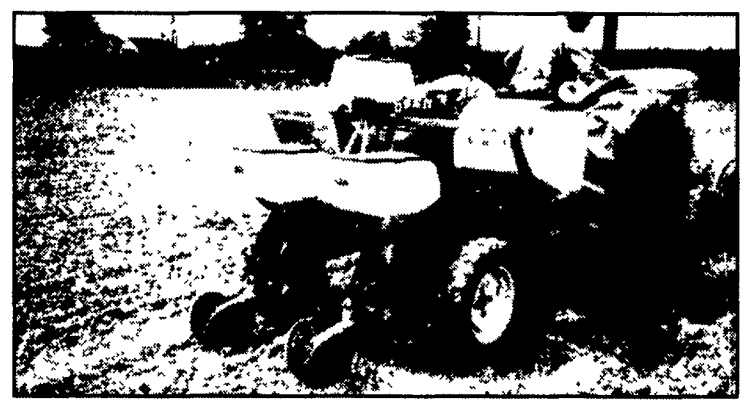
Patented Metering Box



It's easy to change from crop to crop. The correct seed disc is selected based on the size and weight of the seed A bean seed disc, for example, can plant a variety of bean seeds When planting different crops, you need only adjust the metering box vacuum and change seed discs

NG+ 2-row, variable width rowspacing, with dry fertilizer and Microsem granular applicator Shown planting sweet corn in Ohio

Affordable high technology available for the farmer with smaller acreage or multiple crops, but who is still concerned with seed costs, seed spacing, seed singulation, depth control and uniform germination



OTHER PLANTING OPTIONS AVAILABLE

- Large Pumpkin
- Medium Squash/Watermelon
- Large Squash
- Soybean Disc Double Row (Hi Population)
